MASQUE TELLS STORY OF BIRTH OF WASHINGTON

Opens Bicentennial Celebration.

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Through the azure of a star spangled stage, a mammoth masque tonight ushered in symbolically, the birth, 200 years ago, of him whom "numberless unborn shall name father."

The masque, entitled "Wakefield" by its author, Percy MacKaye, also ushered in the George Washington bicentennial celebration which starts tomorrow and will continue throughout the nation until Thanksgiving day.

Hundreds of tourists, hundreds of townspeople went to Constitution hall tonight to see Margaret Anglin portray the "Folk Spirit of America"; to pay tribute to

"Star and Rock and Cedar forged in one Element—the Will of Washington."

The audience, no less than the theme of the masque, was a cross section of this America. Vice President Curtis, one-eighth American Indian, sat in the front box and applauded the full blooded Indians on the stage. Washington school children in the folk costumes of their ancestors sang Scotch songs and Irish songs and the Volga boat song. Alice Roosevelt-Longworth, in black, sat near descendants of the Washington family, in powdered wigs and traditional brocades.

Notables in Attendance.

Sol Bloom, director of the bicentennial, looked on with the appreciation of a showman; Simeon D. Fess, one of the commissioners, smiled his senatorial approval. Paul Claudel, the French ambassador, who himself writes pageants for pastime, clapped his criticism. The Japanese ambassador and his staff seemed not to have a care in the world. The Chinese minister was not there; but virtually every other diplomat was present, save the British ambassador. He has gone out of town this week-end.

Around the theme, the birth of Washington, the masque wove a morality play of the struggle between a nation's will to freedom and its drift, a lazy, dangerous tendency born of fear and muddle; and cabal and persecution; of war and gold and greed and hate. Freedom triumphs; even as the spirit of Washington triumphs over these same attacking forces.

Brilliant Bits of Color.

And all in between were brilliant bits of color and myth and pathos and history. Those heroes of venture, Capt. John Smith and Hendrick Hudson and La Salle strode the stage to prepare for the national scene. To furnish forth our art came characters from Shakespeare and the magna charta proferred justice; and the Bible contributed religion.

"Reflect how much more delightful to an undebauched mind is the task of making improvements on the earth than all the vain glory which can be acquired from ravaging it by conquest."

Outdoor Celebration Today.

These words sent ambassadors and children, blasé Washingtonians, eager country visitors, out into a drizzly rain that glistened effectively on the white shaft of the Washington monument but made officials wonder about tomorrow's elaborate outdoor celebration.

Tomorrow noon President Hoover, attending a joint session of the two houses of congress in the hall of the house, will tell the nation what the first President did to make it a nation. Then will come public exercises on the east front of the capitol. Early in the afternoon the President, accompanied by Mrs. Hoover, will go to Alexandria to review a pageant, and from there will go to Mount Vernon to lay a wreath, one of many, on Washington's tomb.

In the evening everybody gets out the heirloom colonial costume, or rents a modern replica, and goes to one of the numerous balls. The one at Gadsby's tavern, in Alexandria, will have a guest list composed largely of descendants of those guests who lanced at Washington's last birthnight ball in 1798. Costumes, by the way, are so popular in this town now that nobody notices when a solemn looking gentleman gets into a street car with an overcoat over black satin knee breeches.

Tonight's prelude to the bicentennial celebration was itself preceded this morning by special commemorative services in most of the churches. President and Mrs. Hoover journeyed to old Christ church, Alexandria, where Washington was a vestryman. They sat in his pew with its stiff back, its mellow purple velvet cushions, its brass nameplate.

TRADE WHERE TAXES ARE PAID, IS CERMAK IDEA

Mayor Starts New Revenue Drive.

TAX BILLS GO OUT

The Chicago revenue crisis was put directly up to the large property owners yesterday when hundreds of 1930 tax bills on loop real estate were placed in the mail. Personal property tax bills also were sent out to eleven north side banks. Details on page 4.

Mayor Cermak yesterday announced a tentative plan to have city and school board employes use their pay checks—when they get them—as a lever to pry taxes from those who are delaying payments.

Teachers' checks to the amount of $2,517,000, representing salaries for a half month, have been made out and may be mailed this week. Mayor Cermak wishes to use these in the first experiment.

With each check, he proposed, should be sent a message urging the recipient to trade only with those who are even with their tax bills. Something like: "Take Your Trade Where the Taxes Are Paid," is the mayor's idea.

"Encourage Those Who Pay."

"We should encourage those who are doing their full duty in meeting their obligations to the city and county," Mr. Cermak said. "It is also suggested that merchants and other business men who have paid should display prominently signs declaring the fact. I see no reason why we should not issue posters or stickers for these good citizens to put up."

The mayor added that it was feasible to send the message to the taxpayers with their next bills. It is to the interest of every one, he said, to have taxes paid, and certainly to the interest of public employés to help the businesses of persons who are paying their taxes. He asserted that he would be glad to have suggestions for slogans.

Confer Today on Warrants.

Lawyers representing the city, the school board and the teachers will meet this morning to confer on the advisability of issuing $12,250,000 of tax anticipation warrants, constituting a first lien on the 1931 taxes, to employés and creditors of the board. The 1931 taxes, presumably, will be collected in 1933.

The board now owes the teachers seven and a quarter months' pay, and the teachers' demand for something that may be turned into money has resulted in the agitation to issue the warrants. The amounts owed to school board employés, actual until Feb. 1 and estimated since that date, are:

School teachers	$23,619,899
Civil service, education	5,337,408
Civil service, building	1,204,507
Playground instructors	340,769
Total	$30,502,583

Although the school board, at a cost of $24,894, has had 177,100 of the tax anticipation warrants engraved, there has been considerable opposition to their issuance.

City Officials Oppose Plan.

The warrants bear the signatures of President Myers and Secretary Gilbert for the board and Mayor Cermak and Controller Szymczak for the city. City representatives, however, are those most opposed to the issuance.

"To place so many more tax anticipation warrants on the market would lower their value," asserted Corporation Counsel Sexton. "The price might be run down to 75 cents on the dollar, even to 70 or 65 cents."

Ald. John S. Clark, chairman of the council finance committee, described the possibilities as "exceedingly dangerous."

If the warrants should be issued and Mr. Sexton's estimate of a 25 per cent discount should prove true, the school employés would suffer a loss of $7,625,000, assuming that the entire arrears were paid in such paper.

Warrants Asked Last Summer.

Last summer the teachers asked for tax anticipation warrants. The board decided to issue them in December. Then the teachers said that instead they wanted pay checks marked "no funds," the issuance of which has been regarded as legal downstate for years. However, Attorney Henry Cutler, security expert, has declared that such checks would further muddle the whole tax situation. Mr. Cutler is to give an opinion on the validity of the tax warrant issue tomorrow.

No intimation was given as to the source of the money to pay the teachers the half month salaries totaling $2,517,000, but it is believed it will come from the city's aggregate of funds.

INSPIRATION

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SALON, France, Feb. 21.—Albert Sauvant's "crashproof" airplane is also "flightproof," at least in France. The young French inventor, who had planned a deliberate dive to the ground today from a height of 2,500 feet with himself sitting inside a straw padded double fuselage, was given the merry "ha! ha!" by gendarmes. They ran away with a wheel of his landing gear, thus preventing the flight.

The Sauvant party left Nice at 1 a. m. on a wild automobile ride to Salon, a small provincial town. The plane was hidden on the estate of the Marquis de Garan to evade the authorities who had forbidden the flight.

Run Away with Wheel.

Sauvant prepared the plane, kissed his wife good-by, and talked for sound films. The ship bumped uncertainly across a rough field and hit a rock, smashing a wheel. The flyer decided to have lunch while it was repaired. He had scarcely finished his after-dinner liqueur when gendarmes arrived, seized the wheel and drove off with it, after explaining that orders from Paris were to halt the flight at any cost.

The plane still lies with one wheel in the field. Sauvant swears that he will leave France for "a free country" where he can smash his own airplane to pieces in peace.

Although the features of the "crashproof" plane are kept secret, it is learned that it consists of a double walled cabin of duralumin with an asbestos lining. A number of compressed oil shock absorbers are placed in various parts of the cabin, particularly in front of the motor, which is the heaviest part of a ship and hits the ground first.

Presto! and Door Closes.

While in flight the cabin is left open, it is understood. As soon as the pilot finds that the plane is falling, all he needs to do it pull a small lever and the cabin becomes hermetically closed and prepared to absorb the shock of a crash.

Sauvant had planned to leave the gasoline turned on in his test flight so that the plane would catch fire upon crashing, thus proving, he hoped, that the cabin is both shockproof and fireproof.

In his experiments Sauvant used a miniature plane with a lamb as a passenger. The model was released from an airplane at a height of more than 500 feet. The animal was found unhurt after the crash. Another experiment was made with six eggs, all of which were found intact.

FATHER OF TRAIN BABY ARRESTED AS BANK BANDIT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

KITCHENER, Ont., Feb. 21.—One proud father tonight is wondering whether a visit from the stork is such a blessed event after all. The stork caught up with Mr. and Mrs. Harvey G. Blondell of Preston, Ont., on a fast train between Las Vegas and Caliente, Nev., last Wednesday.

Among those who read in the newspapers of the baby's birth was Inspector Boyd of the Ontario provincial police, who recognized the name as that of a man wanted for robbing the bank at Morristown on Nov. 13, last. He immediately communicated with Kitchener and Galt police and Blondell was arrested as he stepped off the train at Galt last night.

As Mrs. Blondell and the new born child were carried to a waiting ambulance, Blondell was taken in a police car to a cell and will appear on a bank robbery charge tomorrow. Police say he has confessed to his part in the holdup.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Oxygen was administered over the week-end to John Drinkwater, British dramatist, who is ill with acute bronchitis. Mrs. Drinkwater said her husband's condition was better tonight, but that he still was in a state of great exhaustion. Sir Thomas Horder, physician to the royal family, was called in for consultation yesterday.

Tries to Save Brother; Two Boys Drowned

Harold Karl Kosary, 12 years old, 2227 North Western avenue, was drowned yesterday when he plunged into a pond in a vain attempt to rescue his brother, Henry, 10 years old. The younger boy had ventured onto thin ice to retrieve a marble and broke through.

The two boys were drowned on Pinehurst farm, owned by Henry Rhein, at 97th street and Archer avenue, in Palos township. Henry Kosary had been sickly, and had lived for the last four years with Rhein, a former business partner of his father, Karl Kosary.

Goes to Visit Brother.

Yesterday Mrs. Betty Gunkel, 1528 West 47th street, an aunt of the boys, took Harold to visit his brother. Her son, John, 10 years old, was also in the party.

The three boys went to a sunny patch of clay beside the pond and started a game of marbles. Henry shot too hard and his marble rolled out on the ice of the pond. He went after it.

Both Go Into Water.

When the ice broke he plunged into water over his head. Harold crept out over the ice to rescue him and he also broke through the ice. John ran to the house, some distance away, and notified the grownups.

Police from the county highway station at Willow Springs were notified and recovered the bodies. After first aid methods had failed the boys were taken to the Little Company of Mary hospital, but physicians pronounced them dead when they arrived there.

Flames Kill 2 as Street Car Strikes Truck

Two persons were burned to death and five others were injured, one of them seriously, in a collision early yesterday between a street car and a motor truck at 75th street and South Chicago avenue. Several other persons in the street car were shaken up by the crash, but escaped unhurt.

The two victims were Walter Paul, 64 years old, of 7530 Langley avenue, motorman of the surface car, and Miss Bernadine Walther, 22 years old, of 7346 Kenwood avenue, a supervisor at the Stewart exchange branch of the telephone company. Miss Walther and Ray Hellesen, 35 years old, of 7516 St. Lawrence avenue, a city fireman, were standing on the front platform of the car with Motorman Paul at the time of the collision.

Showered with Flaming Gasoline.

The car, which was moving east in 75th street, struck the truck, which was being driven northwest in South Chicago avenue. Gasoline in an emergency tank strapped on the running board of the truck exploded and showered the three persons on the front platform of the street car with the burning fluid. Only Hallesen was able to get out and he was severely burned on the face and body. He was taken to the South Shore hospital. The truck was destroyed by the flames.

The others injured are Robert Gebhart, 31 years old, of Columbus, O., driver and owner of the truck; Eurlel Shortt, 30 years old, also of Columbus, Gebhart's assistant; Miss Elvira Johnson, 22 years old, 449 East 75th street, and Mrs. Minnie Moore, 37 years old, colored, 6759 Evans avenue. The women were passengers in the street car. All were taken to the Jackson Park hospital.

Police Hold Two Truckmen.

Gebhart and Shortt were held at the Grand Crossing police station for the inquest. Conflicting stories of the accident were told to Capt. Patrick McCauley.

Gebhart, who was bringing a consignment of merchandise to Chicago from Columbus, said that he proceeded when the traffic lights at the intersection changed for him to go. He was emerging from the underpass of a viaduct when the street car struck his truck, he said.

Edward Lynk, 7657 Stewart avenue, the conductor on the street car, said that he gave the signal for the car to proceed when the lights for east and west traffic changed to green.

Brother Identifies Body.

Miss Walther boarded the street car at Wood street, and had advanced to the front platform preparatory to alighting at Kenwood avenue. Her brother, Ernest, who identified her body last night, told police that Miss Walther had stayed overnight at the home of friends, and had gone to early morning mass. She was on her way home from church when she was killed.

Paul's wife, who has been seriously ill in her home, suffered a relapse when she was notified of her husband's death. Relatives expressed fear that she would not live.

Fireman Hellesen is attached to engine company 49. He was on his way to his station at 73d street and Kingston avenue.

FLY OVER HIGH, LOW POINTS OF U. S. IN ONE HOP

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Carrying a full military fighting load, six California National Guard airplanes today flew 450 miles over the highest and lowest points in the United States.

At an altitude of 14,800 feet the six war birds commanded by Capt. George C. Sherwood, looked down on the snow-clad peak of Mount Whitney, 14,490 feet above sea level.

Swooping down into Death Valley to the southeast, the flyers skimmed 50 feet above the valley floor, the lowest point of which is 276 feet below sea level.

CHINESE CLING TO TOWN; THIRD DAY OF BATTLE

BULLETIN.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 22 (Monday).—(AP)—The fall of Kiangwan village was believed imminent late this afternoon. The Japanese encircling drive was made through a huge gap blasted out of the Chinese line this morning. This afternoon this was followed by a re-enforced artillery bombardment and an attack by a fleet of tanks, which cleared the way of snipers and machine gun nests.

BULLETIN.

TOKIO, Feb. 22 (Monday).—(AP)—Japanese official sources said today it was believed it would require a week or ten days to drive the Chinese army outside the twelve and a half mile zone at Shanghai, after which the Japanese army would occupy the zone line defensively until the situation warranted their withdrawal or a temporary zone was agreed upon. Officials seemed satisfied that the re-enforcements would not be needed unless there were unexpected developments.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 22.—[Monday, 1 p. m.]—The Japanese official report at noon today claimed that Japanese forces, both right and left wings, succeeded today in crossing Hongkew creek, running roughly parallel to the Shanghai-Woosung railway about a mile west of the tracks. The third day of the battle for Shanghai opened at daybreak.

The report claimed that the Japanese vanguard is now approaching the town of Tazang, which is a short distance southwest of Liuho and northwest of the Chinese military headquarters at Chenju, and inland to the north of the tracks of the Shanghai-Nanking railway.

Japanese Surround Kiangwan.

The official statement admitted that the town of Kiangwan is still in the hands of the Chinese, although it is now almost completely surrounded by Japanese forces. Serious Chinese sniping activities this morning in the Hongkew section of the international settlement near Dixwell road caused the Japanese to close all streets in that section to traffic.

Japanese air bombs killed a station agent and six Chinese railway passengers at Nanziang, west of Chenju, yesterday afternoon. Japanese planes also bombed Tazang and several towns and villages in a radius of 30 miles of Shanghai. Seven Chinese civilians were killed at Tazang.

The Chinese claim that another Japanese plane was brought down by an anti-aircraft gun. The plane was engaged in bombing the Chenju headquarters, according to the report. The Chinese also reported that the Japanese dropped six bombs near the wireless station of the Chinese government and Radio Corporation of America, but it is said no damage was caused, as the bombs fell in open fields.

Block Army of 25,000.

[Copyright: 1932: By the Associated Press.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 22 [Monday.]—The Japanese offensive, repulsed time and again by dogged Chinese soldiers, reopened with a crash at daybreak along the Kiangwan-Chapei front in a further attempt to wrest a village from a handful of men.

A few hundred Chinese troops today still held the walled village of Kiangwan, midway of the battle line from Chapei to Woosung, against the strategy and blows of a Japanese army of 25,000.

Japanese heavy artillery roared into action against the stout defenders and other Chinese troops entrenched along the front with the break of the third day of the great push. Chinese field guns took up the signal of renewed battle manfully, returning shell for shell.

Rain Hinders Visibility.

With the visibility through heavy mists and driving rain so poor as to make observations impossible, the Japanese guns shot blindly. Tanks and troops, rushed into battle yesterday, were expected to follow up the barrage with promise of a decisive engagement as the powerful Chinese defenses northwest of Kiangwan were encountered.

With the Japanese garrison at Woosung seriously drained by the demand for fighters for the Kiangwan sector, unofficial observers interpreted Chinese troop movements toward Woosung as indicating that the Chinese hoped to take advantage of the Japanese weakness at this far extremity of the battle front by launching an offensive of their own.

400 Troops Hold Village.

Although the Japanese drove a hole in the Chinese line north of Kiangwan, Chinese troops, estimated by the Japanese at only 400, held the village against a frontal attack by tanks, artillery, cavalry and infantry in yesterday's assault.

At midnight approached their casualties were unnumbered, but the Japanese admitted they themselves had lost 300 men, dead or injured.

The Japanese altered their plan of action shortly after darkness had set in and rushed reinforcements just north of Kiangwan, driving a hole in the Chinese line there. They previously had pushed in the Chinese defenses south of Kiangwan. They hoped to surround the town on the southeast, east, north, and northwest, leaving the Chinese an avenue of escape southwestward. They declared it would be poor strategy to cut off a Chinese retreat.

The general Japanese plan of action appeared to center at Kiangwan. They had pushed in an eastward curve of the Chapei-Woosung 16 mile line until it was almost straight in a north and south direction between those two points except at Kiangwan. Capture of that ancient walled village would open for them a double gate, which they could swing on the left toward Chapei and on the right toward Woosung. Until they could accomplish this they must therefore continue to try nutcracker tactics at Kiangwan.

Chapei and Woosung themselves were quiet last night after intensive activity at both ends of the line earlier in the day.

There was some evidence that the Chinese intended to retreat soon from Kiangwan. Japanese airplanes continued to strafe bodies of Chinese troops moving westward in the Kiangwan area and many buildings in the town were in flames.

Japanese Switch Plans.

The Japanese military strategists in changing their tactics to the north of Kiangwan said they were unwilling to sacrifice lives needlessly by rushing the village walls. They hoped by their north flank assault to endanger a greater area of the Kiangwan defense, and as a result force the village garrison to flee.

Last night a battery of 16 Japanese howitzers was thrust into action north of the walled town, but their gains appeared to be negligible to neutral observers. The Japanese claimed, however, to have made an advance of two miles on both sides of Kiangwan.

Their attack on the north drew the heaviest reply from Chinese artillery they had yet encountered. Many shells were dropped near the Kiangwan race course, where part of the Japanese headquarters and cavalry and tank units were stationed.

Set Fire to Houses.

While the Chinese shells failed to register direct hits on the Japanese military positions, several shacks between the race course and Gen. Kenkichi Uyeda's headquarters just to the southeast were fired. Several projectiles fell around Fuhtan university, where the Japanese general was quartered last night, and one blasted a pit in the road within a few yards of the university entrance.

Military observers here were of the opinion that Chinese losses from both bombing and artillery yesterday were slight, owing to the poor visibility, and they held that the stubborn resistance and poor weather probably would lead Japan to send more troops to Shanghai. It was pointed out that the Japanese took every precaution to prevent unnecessary loss of men, and they gave as a reason for halting the advance south of Kiangwan as concern for the international settlement, which would be placed in the line of fire.

The rival press information bureaus of the two armies issued contradictory statements last night. The Chinese said the Japanese had "cremated hundreds of bodies of Japanese marines killed on the Chapei-Woosung line" at Chenshan, an island off Ningpo at the mouth of the Yangtze. The Chinese gave details, saying the bodies were brought to Chenshan aboard a transport.

U. S. Doughboys Watch Battle.

American doughboys and marines guarding the northern borders of the international settlement spent Sunday in "watchful waiting" and in strengthening their defenses against stray bullets and shells.

Following a skirmish between Chinese machine gunners and a Japanese armored car, the men on the 31st infantry and the 4th regiment decided they needed more sandbags and armored plate and they piled them on until they were virtually buried within their defenses.

American troops opposite the Chapei railroad station veritably rubbed elbows with Chinese soldiers. They called back and forth passing the time of day and inquired regarding each other's feelings toward the conflict.

While the Chinese were strengthening their lines, a Chinese trooper fell victim to a Japanese bullet and tumbled almost within reach of the American barricades while the occupants looked on.

CHINESE HOLD ON AS JAPAN'S GUNS BATTER WOOSUNG

Nippon Warships Shell Fortress Area.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 21. [Midnight].—The little town of Woosung adjoining the mud walled forts further clinched its reputation as China's "Dardanelles" and withstood another furious bombardment of the Japanese fleet today.

An official Japanese naval report tonight said the first Japanese torpedo boat flotilla and the third battle squadron fired numerous rounds into the Chinese positions. The navy's report yesterday stated that the Chinese guns had been silenced as a result of yesterday morning's bombardment, but last night the Chinese again fired on the Japanese positions south of Woosung creek. They also attempted a night raid, but the Japanese claimed they frustrated the assault.

Japanese Claim Victory.

Maj. Miyawaki, intelligence officer attached to the headquarters of Gen. Kenkichi Uyeda, Japanese commander, tonight announced that the Japanese forces had crossed the Shanghai-Woosung railway and occupied about two-thirds of Kiangwan. This claim is scoffed at by military observers who insist that the village is still in the hands of the Chinese.

I visited the race track pavilion yesterday and observed the Japanese troop movements from the vantage point of a reserved seat, but this afternoon it was impossible to approach nearer than 1,000 yards because of rifle firing. Bullets whizzed past my automobile.

Capture Chinese Snipers.

The Japanese claimed their right flank succeeded in passing beyond the village of Kiangwan and reaching the bank of Hongchew creek opposite the town of Tamacren, which is the Japanese objective tomorrow. The Japanese captured a large number of alleged Chinese plain clothes gunmen today and announced it had been necessary to burn a large number of Chinese houses in which gunmen were concealed.

Japanese bombing planes were unable to fly this afternoon because of low clouds and a misty atmosphere.

Chinese newspapers here today declared that a Chinese military conference had been held at Pukow, opposite Nanking, and was attended by Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, virtual dictator of China, Wang Ching-wei, the Cantonese, and others, at which preparations were made for a prolonged armed resistance.

It was stated that Marshal Chiang visited the entire Chinese line two days ago and inspected their positions. After his tour it was decided that the Christian general, Feng Yu-hsiang, should come to Shanghai to assist in the direction of the campaign against the Japanese.

Capt. E. R. Kennedy, assistant British police commissioner of the international settlement, was severely beaten by Japanese marines in the Hongkew section of Shanghai last night. The marines were beating a Chinese when Capt. Kennedy requested that he be turned over to the municipal authorities for investigation and trial. The marines, incensed at Kennedy's interference, struck him several blows with their rifles, after which the Chinese was taken to Japanese naval headquarters and imprisoned.

British authorities protested and a Japanese officer apologized to Kennedy and the Chinese resident was released.

Japanese Are Angry.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 21.—"Now that we are mad we shall make quick work of them."

This statement made this morning by a Japanese official spokesman seemed to be borne out this afternoon after a tour of inspection of nearby fronts.

The Japanese are mad and are fighting furiously, becoming additionally incensed every hour the Chinese unexpectedly bar them from their objectives, the capture of which Gen. Kenkithi Uyeda's staff had mapped out with clocklike precision.

The first attempt to approach Kiangwan was futile after the correspondent made the mistaken choice of North Szechuan road past the Japanese naval landing headquarters and Hongkew park. At Hongkew sentries stopped the automobile and a civilian interpreter appeared and ... ously asked the correspondent to retrace his route and approach Kiangwan from another direction, declaring "just here it is very dangerous."

Concussion Lifts Auto.

This statement was instantaneously validated by the explosion of a Chinese shell so close that the automobile was actually lifted from the ground by the concussion.

Kiangwan was approached by a road leading directly westward from the river. Everywhere Japanese sentries guarding barbed wire barricades across the roads exhibited cordiality and courtesy.

Before reaching the Kiangwan front two immense landing fields were encountered where more than 50 Japanese planes were landed and reëquipped with bombs awaiting orders for new flights. Great billows of smoke were apparent ahead, darkening the skies. The smoke arose from flaming portions of the Kiangwan race course, Kiangwan village and the adjacent clusters of houses and shops.

Artillery in Action.

While sentries inspected passes at crossroads, the silence was broken with the terrific belch of a succession of ten pieces of Japanese heavy artillery just ahead. These guns are being used against Chinese forces still holding Kiangwan village, though they are hopelessly and completely isolated by the westward advance of the Japanese, from the lines. Except for a group of blue clad Chinese coolies, harnessed to a heavy stone roller flattening the highway, Chinese are unseen in this area.

Japan's Nutcracker

Dotted line with arrow shows southwesterly advance of brigade of Japanese troops from Woosung creek in a move to hem in the Chinese at the village of Kiangwan. The new Japanese objective is Tazang, three miles due west of Kiangwan. Dispatches today said that Japanese marines had captured Mauhang, northeast of Tazang. Meanwhile, Japanese troops were trying to dislodge the Chinese defenders of Kiangwan by artillery fire from the east.

"Grey Fox" of 76 Years Easy Winner of Japan's Elections

TOKIO, Feb. 22 [Monday].—(AP)—The Seiyukai party of Premier Suyoshi Inukai was leading in returns today from Japan's general election by such a margin that its leaders claimed the government had remained in power by an unprecedented victory.

PREMIER INUKAI.
[Acme Photo.]

The party of Japan's "Grey Fox," the 76 year old Inukai, took over the power last December with a majority in the house of representatives, which made the election test of its control inevitable. The returns up to midnight gave it a lead of thirty-six seats over the Minseito, the principal opposition.

With 160 out of the diet's 466 seats reported, the standing was: Seiyukai, 96; Minseito, 60; others, 4.

Thus the party in power at the time of the election apparently won again, as it usually does in Japanese elections, and this time with a much needed majority indicated. Whereas a small margin had been expected, the leaders of the government were so encouraged that they predicted their total in the new house would be 300.

Nearly every district where the counting began soon after the polls closed Saturday, reported heavy Seiyukai gains and Minseito losses.

The final outcome, however, will not be known until tonight at the earliest, two-thirds of the ballot boxes remaining unopened.

The election, without significance so far as foreign policy was concerned, was principally on economic issues. "A vote for the Seiyukai hastens the return of prosperity," was that party's slogan.

The Minseito party, which lost control when the cabinet of former Premier Reijiro Wakatsuki fell last December, argued that "one cannot feed on a fictitious boom," referring to the Seiyukai's assertion that its inflationary policy would bring better times.

The new diet was elected to replace the one dissolved on Jan. 21. In that diet the Minseito held 247 seats against 171 held by the Seiyukai and 48 by the independents, proletarians and other groups.

Japanese Build Up Defense of Concession at Hankow

HANKOW, China, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The Japanese concession today began increasing its defenses; and bluejackets in barracks ashore were held ready for an emergency. The concession was fortified by earthworks supported by steel and iron plates. All roads into the area were blocked by barbed wire entanglements. Sandbag barricades and "pill boxes" were erected at various strategic points.

EXPLODING SHELL HITS SHANGHAI FIREMEN; 6 HURT

SHANGHAI, Feb. 22.—[Monday.]—(AP)—Caught by an exploding shell while fighting a fire in the Hongkew district of the international settlement, six firemen, including three foreigners, were wounded late last night.

The firemen ran to the blaze in response to an urgent call from Japanese soldiers who were patrolling that section.

WE LEAVE CHINA ALONE WHEN WAR LORDS GO! JAPAN

Foreign Minister States Tokio's Policy.

Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japan's foreign minister has written for the Associated Press a new statement of Japanese policy. It is especially timely in view of the fact that the league of nations assembly has been called for an extraordinary session on March 3. This was done at the request of China for examination of the dispute in Manchuria and the Shanghai incident.

BY KENKICHI YOSHIZAWA.
[Foreign Minister of Japan.]

[Copyright: 1932: By the Associated Press.]

TOKIO, Feb. 21.—It has been suggested that Japan might, whether from pique or policy, withdraw from the league of nations. This is a silly idea.

KENKICHI YOSHIZAWA.

Japan has been able through her membership in the council of the league of nations to put a brake upon precipitate action, which she could have done in no other manner. The generous enthusiasm of western observers might, in Japan's absence from the league, have carried them into premature action based on natural but mistaken assumptions.

It would be the height of folly to abandon so favorable a position. Moreover Japan is proud of her participation in the work of the league, in which she has since its first inception taken a prominent part.

Has Added Respect for Covenant.

Recent events have only strengthened her respect for the wisdom with which the covenant of the league was framed, preventing as it does the league or its council from being identified with the majority of its council members, a mistake too often made by the ignorant.

Much less is it possible that this country should repudiate the Briand-Kellogg treaty for the outlawry of war. Had this treaty been duly observed there would have been no attack on the South Manchuria railway nor on Japanese patrols at Shanghai.

It would be equally impossible and undesirable to repudiate the Washington nine power treaty, which is a great beacon standing alone in the mazes of Chinese international relations.

We cannot pretend, however, that this succinct treaty furnishes anything like a complete guide to international dealings with China. Had China since the fall of the Manchu dynasty ever presented a coherent, responsible front to the world, things might have been different.

China a State of Chaos.

But in the present distracted state of that country, ravaged as it is by the rival ambitions of contending militarists' scheme, the nine power treaty becomes inadequate. It contemplated some sort of order where there never has really been anything but chaos.

Therefore, while Japan is fully determined to live up to the provisions of the treaty as far as they go, she feels they do not go very far. Would a new treaty, the product of a new conference like that of Washington, prove any more complete? We cannot help feeling in view of the kaleidoscopic state of affairs in China that it might produce more harm than good to endeavor to lay down in conference fixed lines of conduct and detailed provisions for application in that continually changing scene.

It is the settled policy of Japan to deal with each case as it arises by the simple method of direct negotiations with China.

The defect in the Washington treaty, it seems to me, is that it envisaged China not as it was but as the powers thought it ought to be. This has deprived that instrument of much of its value. To face the facts is the first requisite of statesmanship.

Uneasiness Unjustified.

An entirely unjustified uneasiness apears to exist in some quarters concerning whether Japan may occupy permanently portions of Chinese territory south of the great wall. It would be most repugnant to Japan to undertake commitments of such a kind involving her in responsibilities altogether unnecessary and inconvenient. Japan has not the slightest intention of stultifying herself by such a step. Neither north nor south of the great wall does Japan desire to embark on occupation of territory beyond what she already has on lease.

The troops at present in Shanghai will be kept there precisely so long and in such numbers as they are necessary to direct the protection of Japanese interests there, just as American, British, French, and Italian troops are there for the protection of their own people and property.

The question has been raised whether Japan might not be led to abandon her friendship for America and Great Britain, which heretofore has been such a conspicuous feature of her foreign policy. It should be obvious that the vast interests of America and Britain in the Pacific, as well as long standing cultural and economic ties binding Japan to those countries, must continue to operate in the future as they have in the past. Not only sentiment but necessity will lend Japan to maintain the friendliest relations and coöperation.

The presence of Japanese forces outside the railway zone in Manchuria appears to have caused uneasy apprehensions that it may be prolonged into virtual annexation. This is a complete mistake.

Japan desires no continental commitments. She recognizes fully and absolutely the principles of the open door and equal opportunity throughout Manchuria as well as in China proper. Nor has Japan the slightest territorial ambition there. She only desires peace and security with participation in the field equally with other nations for her commercial industry. Without civil peace there can be no open door.

As for the government of Manchuria, that is a matter for Manchurians, and it rests with the future to say what their decision will be.

I regret profoundly, as must every thinking Japanese, the loss of life and destructive havoc of the last five months. Unfortunately, as long as China remains the happy hunting grounds of selfish and predatory war lords, this danger will remain.

China Must Demilitarize.

Japan sympathizes warmly with innocent Chinese people and with the praise worthy efforts of the Chinese to attain equality in all respects with the most advanced nations. But first they must achieve domestic peace. Until that has been accomplished other nations will from time to time be faced with the stern necessity of defending themselves against militaristic violence in the only way that such defense is possible.

We can only hope that this lesson has been learned and that China may soon break her feudal chains and rid herself of the incubus of militarism which has so long prevented her from playing that part in world affairs for which she otherwise has so many shining qualifications.

CHINA IS AGGRESSOR! IS JAPAN'S RETORT TO APPEAL BY LEAGUE

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

TOKIO, Feb. 21.—Japan's statement in answer to the latest league of nation's appeal not to undertake an offensive at Shanghai was sent to Geneva today. According to a summary of the reply to the league, to be published in Nichi Nichi tomorrow, the answer will say:

1. Japan fails to understand why the appeal was addressed to Japan alone.

2. The league assumes Japan is on the offensive whereas Japan is acting in self-defense.

3. The Chinese demand a peaceful settlement but at the same time continue attacking the Japanese. To ask Japan to withdraw her troops now is tantamount to asking her to abrogate her rights.

4. If Japan has viloated Article X. by sending troops to Shanghai, so have many other powers.

5. In the present circumstances Japan cannot understand why the dispatch of troops on her part should be regarded as a violation of Chinese independence and integrity.

6. The league has no concern with the nine-power treaty.

7. The league makes a fundamental error in treating China as a well-organized state instead of a chaotic country without a responsible government.

DR. M'ALLISTER QUITS PULPIT OF ST. LUKE'S

The Rev. Charles Eldridge McAllister yesterday announced his resignation as rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, Evanston, a position he had held for less than eleven months.

In the announcement Dr. McAllister declared in general terms that he was not in accord with the policies of the church vestry. This board has always been on harmonious terms with the Rt. Rev. George Craig Stewart, bishop of Chicago, who was rector of St. Luke's for twenty-six years before his elevation to the episcopacy.

The church, which has a membership of more than 3,000 and buildings valued in excess of $1,000,000, is one of the largest in the country. It owns and operates large apartment houses on church property.

Dr. McAllister specified that his resignation should take place in the spring. He said later that he had no present plans as to his future, but that he was determined to leave the rectorate at that time. His resignation came as a surprise to most of his parishioners, who are said to have regarded him as exceptionally able.

Before going to Evanston Dr. McAllister was rector of St. Michael and All Saints church in Baltimore. He left that post over the protest of members of the church and it was said that Gov. Albert C. Ritchie requested him to remain in Maryland.

The retiring rector of St. Luke's is 38 years old. He was born in Providence, R. I. In 1914 he was granted a bachelor's degree at St. Stephen's college, and in 1917 received his M. A. at Columbia university. In 1917 he also obtained his B. D. degree from the General Theological seminary, New York, and in 1918 was ordained in the Episcopal ministry.

He held rectorates in Hampton, Va., and Hyattsville, Md. Later he was executive secretary of the diocese of Newark, N. J., resigning to accept the rectorate in Baltimore. For two years he was secretary of the field department of the national council of the Episcopal church.

CHICAGO CASH CRISIS PUT UP TO TAXPAYERS

Bills Go Out to Owners of Loop Realty.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

This week will probably indicate how much the larger property owners will help the local governments in their financial troubles. All of the owners of real estate in the central business district will be given an opportunity to pay their 1930 taxes.

A large part of County Treasurer McDonough's force was busy all day yesterday sending out tax bills, and will also work on the holiday today. April 15 has been set as the date when penalties will be added for the delayed payment of real estate taxes.

In addition to real estate, Chief Clerk Otto Woerter of the treasurer's office was engaged in sending out personal property tax bills to the banks. In response to the bank bills delivered last Friday and Saturday, five loop banks have paid an aggregate of $3,285,463.59—their total assessments—in personal property taxes, and it is expected that other operating banks will follow that example.

Bills Sent to Eleven More Banks.

	Valuation.	Tax.
Aetna State .....$	140,000 $	9,604.07
Boulevard Bridge	270,000	18,522.22
Cosmopolitan State ..	290,000	19,894.18
Fullerton State	87,500	6,002.85
Immigrant State	40,000	2,744.08
Lake Shore Tr. & Sav.	36,000	2,470.23
North Ave. State	252,000	17,287.53
Old Colony State	90,000	6,174.38
Parkway State	50,000	3,430.00
Prudential State Sav.	90,000	6,174.52
Upper Avenue	150,000	10,290.00
	1,495,500	102,594.06

Regardless of what solution may finally be decided upon for the tax muddle, it is generally believed that the amount of personal property on the tax rolls must be increased, and that the value of some property now on the rolls will be boosted.

Point to Jarecki Decision.

Accordingly, officials say, there is no point in paying only a part of the personal property taxes. Because of the lack of that kind of property on the rolls, County Judge Jarecki held the 1928 and 1929 taxes illegal and void, and the supporters of his decision have said repeatedly that more personal property must be placed on the tax rolls to make them valid.

Hundreds of real estate tax bills for loop property were placed in the mail last night. A few of the larger items are listed below as given in "Vol. I—South Chicago" of the tax records. The bills were mailed to the addresses given, which may or may not be the street numbers of the properties.

Hope to Get Percentage.

A report was circulated last week that the large property owners would generally pay a percentage of their real estate taxes, instead of the entire assessment. It is said by lawyers acquainted with the work of the special session of the legislature that the Schnackenberg bill amply protects those who happen to make an excess payment of taxes now. This bill provides that in case of a reassessment, the owner who has paid too much shall receive credit on a subsequent tax bill.

Mayor Cermak and City Controller Szymczak will resume their drive tomorrow on property owners who are delinquent on their 1928 and 1929 taxes. From these the controller hopes to obtain considerable cash.

The finance committee of the city council is scheduled to begin public hearings this morning on Mayor Cermak's recommendation that 2,479 city employés be discharged at an estimated saving of $6,345,740. The county board will resume its budget discussions tomorrow. The proposed county budget is larger than the one of last year which added to the debts of the community.

Garner Assails President, Alleging Credit Snatching

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—A bit more of the splendid sheen that marked the harmony agreement between the administration and the congressional Democrats was roughly rubbed off today by Speaker John N. Garner.

Bluntly the Texas Democrat announced that coöperation might be a very fine thing but it was time to call a halt when the other fellow began grabbing for all the credit.

"Coöperation does not mean that one party shall claim the right to have everything it asks enacted into law, to the exclusion of what the other party deems necessary for the public welfare," said Mr. Garner, in adding his word to similar plaints that have come alternately and with increasing frequency from the congress Democrats and from the White House.

Ask Share in Honors, Too.

The Democrats in house and senate, said the speaker, have done their share in passing emergency legislation.

"Our course," he declared, "has met with approbation all over the country—in fact nobody has ventured to criticize us with the exception of the administration, which appears to regard it as requisite not only that the Democrats shall sign on the dotted line but insists that the administration should have all the credit for whatever is accomplished.

Mr. Garner pointed out that the treasury deficit comes at the end of 12 years of Republican control; and the task of the Democrats in straightening things out, said he, had not been made easier by the errors of hundreds of millions of dollars in the budget estimates submitted by the President. "We regard it as part of the undeclared compact of concert for the public good, that when we have altered an administration measure the administration coöperate with us in getting it passed instead of jockeying to have its own way exclusively, and without an effort to make the country believe that whenever we do not follow the letter of the President's proposals we are playing politics."

Claim Democratic Ideas.

"So far we have had no coöperation in the true sense of the word. Such measures as the Glass-Steagall amendment, which has its foundation in legislation frequently sought by Democratic legislators and as frequently vetoed by the then Republican majority are claimed as triumphs for the administration."

And now that the President goes after credit for urging reorganization of the government departments, said Speaker Garner, instead of submitting a definite program for the consideration of congress, he asks blanket authority to do the job himself.

CAMPAIGN ISSUE AGAINST HULL IS DRY LAW RECORD

War Veteran Is Primary Opponent Again.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Congressman William E. [Ed] Hull, ex-distiller who voted for the Jones 5 and 10 dry law, again faces a hard battle for renomination in the Republican primaries in April. Everett M. Dirksen, a liberal and a popular young Legionnaire from Pekin, who ran him a neck and neck race in 1930, is again Hull's opponent.

Two years ago Hull won the nomination by 1,155, which was accounted too close a squeeze for comfort by the old organization. Hull lost his home county of Peoria, which Dirksen carried by 1,769, and he dropped Tazewell county, which Dirksen won by 1,245. The other four counties pulled the congressman through—Bureau, which he won by 2,063; Marshall, by 879; Putnam, by 840, and Stark, by 387.

Dirksen and the "Young Turk" movement which rolled up the vote in 1930 with a house to house canvass this time appear more strongly entrenched, and the old line Republican leaders backing Hull have been admitting for the last six months that they are apprehensive of the outcome. Ever since he lost last time Dirksen has conducted a campaign, more or less actively. Legion forces throughout the district have been mustered by the Dirksen camp.

Charges Flip Flop on Issue.

Prohibition is the leading issue in the campaign. Dirksen, a modificationist, has always attacked Hull for his stand on the wet and dry question. In the last campaign he shouted all over the district that Hull was elected as a "wet" and then lined up with the "drys," and he threw stress upon Hull's action in voting for the Jones five and ten law.

After reading the handwriting on the wall, Hull, to the desolation of the Anti-Saloon League, turned a flip flop from the dry side to the wet. His gymnastics were dwelt upon by James Hamilton Lewis in his Democratic campaign for United States senator in 1930 on a dripping wet plank. Audiences were enraptured by Senator Lewis' description of Hull as a big shot in the so-called Peoria whisky trust back in the days before Volstead, who had embraced the Anti-Saloon league and had voted dry in congress, but who was now hitting the sawdust trail on the liquor issue. The new version of the prodigal son was given wide publicity in the prints.

Becomes Beer Champion.

Congressman Hull has recently been uplifting his voice in congress for the return of beer containing 3.2 per cent of alcohol by weight. To demonstrate the completeness of his conversion, he sent a cable from Paris last year conveying an ultimatum that the Republican party must insert a modification plank in its platform or lose the support of the wets.

Two Democratic candidates are contesting for the nomination in their party primaries. The Rev. Edwin S. Carr, Peoria, and James Rahn, Pekin, have announced their candidacy.

The Rev. Mr. Carr ran as a liberal Democrat against Mr. Hull in the election of 1930. In his campaigning he charged that Hull had deserted his constituency by voting dry after the district had voted wet in two referenda on the wet and dry question.

"Did Mr. Hull give ear to the voice of the people who voted for modification?" asked the Rev. Mr. Carr. "O, yes, by voting for the Jones 5 and 10 law."

In Double Jeopardy.

The preacher's onslaughts smoked out Mr. Hull into an avowal, before the November election, that he would vote for repeal of the 18th amendment and to modify the Volstead act if the district voted that way on the referendum which the Republican state party was fathering. The vote in Nov. 1930 gave Hull 36,572 and Carr 32,692, the congressman winning by 3,880.

Mr. Carr is for local option on prohibition and for repeal of the 18th amendment and modification of the Volstead act.

SAYS FESS THROWS MUCH OF HIS MAIL INTO WASTE BASKET

Cleveland, O., Feb. 21.—[U. P.]—Mrs. Amasa Stone Mather, Ohio chairman of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, made public tonight an exchange of correspondence with Senator Simeon D. Fess which she said showed that the senator threw much of his mail in the waste basket.

MRS. AMASA S. MATHER. [Assoc. Press Photo.]

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin of New York, national leader of the organization, had written the senator three times in an effort to learn his attitude on a prohibition referendum. Fess ignored them, Mrs. Mather said, and she then wrote one herself.

"I confine my effort on matters of this sort to the halls of legislation," Fess replied.

Mrs. Mather wrote again and Fess responded:

"I can only repeat that I pay no attention to propaganda letters without regard to source. During the bonus agitation there were 1,061 pieces of mail which came to my office on the first delivery one morning, which was only one of five deliveries a day. All of that mail was thrown into the waste basket, first, because it represented no intelligent thought on the part of the sender, and second, it was nothing but an effort of manufactured clamor."

CERMAK ORDERS CITY PURCHASING CUT TO MINIMUM

While Mayor Cermak is reducing the pay of city employés for the sake of economy, he is also, city officials pointed out yesterday, directing the department heads to keep as low as possible their purchases of materials and supplies.

The continuation order, under which the city is operating pending the passage of the 1932 budget, docks the employés six days' pay a month. It also authorizes the department heads to make expenditures for purposes other than salaries, "but only to the minimum amount necessary to the maintenance of absolutely essential functions of government."

"Besides the saving effected by cutting down on purchases," said Business Agent Cervenka, "the city is paying lower prices for many commodities than it did in 1930. The prices of many articles the city buys have been reduced between 10 and 20 per cent."

A statement issued by Mr. Cervenka shows that the number of buying orders handled by the business agent's office in 1930 was 46,145. During 1931 the number of orders was 50,323, of which approximately 20,000 were given during the first three months of the year under the previous administration.

Despite the increased number of purchases the amount expended in 1931 was $121,484 less than in 1930, the purchases totaling $2,966,163 for 1931 and $3,087,637 for 1930.

HANGS SELF IN HOME.

James Sfinoky, 55 years old, 5130 South Tahman avenue, hanged himself to a bedpost in his home with his belt early yesterday. He had been unable to work because of ill health, his widow told police.

CUT FARM BOARD, NOT SALARIES OF CONGRESS—REED

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Being a member of congress is not a "meaningless government activity," according to Senator David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.]

In a letter to a constituent, made public today, he opposes the current movement to reduce the salaries of senators and representatives. If members of congress, he writes, are not worth the $10,000 a year they receive "the fault rests with the voters and not with these whom the voters elect."

"If the publications and the people who are fond of agitating this subject would give half as much time and attention to fighting wasteful and stupid appropriations for meaningless governmental activities, such as the hundreds of millions we have spent for farm relief that doesn't relieve, it would be much more constructive than this quibbling over congressional salaries," the Pennsylvania senator's answering letter says.

To reduce the salaries of senators and congressmen would make it almost impossible for a poor man to serve in congress," Senator Reed's letter states.

GARNER IN RACE SEEN AS BREAK FOR ROOSEVELT

Expected to Solve Dry Problem in South.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The emergence of Speaker John N. Garner [Tex.] into the field of major contenders for the Democratic nomination for President and the effect it will have on the fortunes of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, still the leading candidate, are the subject of no end of speculation among the politicians this weekend.

The anti-Roosevelt men are viewing the development with the greatest satisfaction. They calculate that Garner will be able to round up a good many delegations, particularly in the south, that otherwise would go to Roosevelt. With Al Smith gathering wet delegates in the wet east and Garner lining up [politically] dry delegates in the [politically] dry south there should be an aggregation, together with the forces of various favorite sons, far exceeding the 385 necessary to veto the nomination of Roosevelt, as the foes of the New York governor figure it.

Rooseveltians Claim Benefit.

Roosevelt partisans profess not to be downhearted over the Garner boom. As they view the situation, the Garner following will be composed of delegates unalterably opposed to the renomination of Smith and more favorable to Roosevelt than to any one Smith is likely to try to put across in the convention. They calculate that if Roosevelt gets within shouting distance of the nomination in the early balloting the Garner strength will be the first to disintegrate and flock to the favorite.

As a result of the sudden prominence the Garner candidacy has attained everybody is asking whether the speaker is wet or dry. Mr. Garner himself has been plied with that question, but all in vain up to date. He refuses to say. The anti-Roosevelt men who are hoping that Garner will prove acceptable to Smith are saying that of course the speaker is wet, for although a southerner he voted against the 18th amendment and the Volstead act.

Dry Indorsements Significant.

The Roosevelt shouters profess to be quite as firmly convinced that he is a dry, or at least dry enough to be acceptable to the dry organizations fighting repeal of the 18th amendment. They cannot conceive William G. McAdoo and Senator Morris Sheppard [Dem., Tex.], co-author of the 18th amendment, indorsing Garner, as they have done, unless the speaker had given them to understand that he is opposed to repeal or modification of the prohibition law.

The McAdoo indorsement of Garner was hailed with enthusiasm in the Roosevelt camp for the reason that it operated to take the Ku Klux curse off the Roosevelt candidacy. When last week Homer Cummings of Connecticut, McAdoo manager in 1924, appeared in Washington to coördinate the Roosevelt forces and called to his aid Dan Roper, another McAdoo manager, the foes of the New York governor chorused that McAdoo's army of Kluxers of 1924 was lining up for Roosevelt. The McAdoo announcement favoring Garner took the wind out of that taunt, the Roosevelt lieutenants feel.

In some quarters it is surmised that the Garner boom has caused Roosevelt to strike a firmer note in favor of prohibition repeal, on which he is accused of pussyfooting in order to win the [politically] dry south and far west. Yesterday for the first time in a public speech the governor referred openly to his espousal of repeal which was recorded in his letter to Senator Robert F. Wagner [Dem., N. Y.] in 1930. He made the point that return of the control of liquor to the tates would enable them to obtain a large revenue of which they are now deprived.

First Test in New Hampshire.

The first test of Roosevelt strength will com next month. On March 8 the New Hampshire Democrats will elect their delegation to the convention in a primary. Slates of Roosevelt and of Smith delegates have been entered. If Smith gets the delegation the Roosevelt candidacy will be dealt a severe blow. If Roosevelt wins Roosevelt stock will go up considerably Then on March 15 Roosevelt will contend with Alfalfa Bill Murray of Oklahoma in the North Dakota primary New Hampshire will furnish a straw indicating whether Roosevelt is conservative enough to suit the east, North Dakota whether he is radical enough to suit the haunts of the sons of the wild jackass.

Other stars will be Gloria Holden, Roman Behnen and Jay Fassett, principals of "As Husbands Go," at the Adelphi theater; Hank Moeller and Hal Gilles, stars of the W-G-N minstrel show, formerly "Herr Louie and the Weasel," and 24 pretty girls from the Harrison high school in a Polish dance.

Wayne King will be well supported at the Aragon by artists from radio and the stage. Girls Will Sing Duet.

Allan Rogers and Marian Palmer, principals of "The Chocolate Soldier," at the Erlanger theater, will sing a love duet and from Northwestern university will come the "Melody Three" [Harriet Brewer, Margarite Jacobsen, and Marion Cole], a singing girl trio, with Chicago's radio queen, Miss Ruth Wenter, also of Northwestern. Bob Elson, sports announcer of W-G-N, will be accompanied to the Aragon by the frolicking trio, Tom, Dick, and Harry, with Carl Hoefel at the piano and Lawrence Salerno, Italian baritone, and Allan Grant, concert pianist, are scheduled for an appearance.

The Oxford Singers, the official George Washington male quartet, will visit both the Aragon and Trianon and sing two numbers, George M. Cohan's "Father of the Land We Love," and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia."

Nearly every form of entertainment has been called upon to assist in the splendid work of feeding 10,000 boys and girls each noon. Bridge players, loop theaters, boxing fans and Sunday schools have all coöperated in swelling this fund. Tonight the dancers of Chicago are asked to do their share.

IN THE LONG RUN VINCENT IS NOT GOOD AT ESCAPE

Vincent Mohr, 19 years old, 65 West 64th street, and Byron Kent, 22 years old, 6031 Drexel boulevard, were riding in a stolen automobile at 49th and State streets last night when Motorcycle Policeman Richard Zimmerman arrested them.

The pair were taken to the Wabash avenue police station. In front of it Mohr jerked away from the policeman and fled. Zimmerman let him get away and after seeing Kent safely into a cell went back to work.

An hour later, as he was patrolling in the vicinity of 64th street and Union avenue, Zimmerman saw a familiar face. It was that of Mohr. He had stolen another car and started to ride. This time Zimmerman was careful and Mohr joined his friend in the cell.

POLICE GROUP WARNS AGAINST CUTTING FORCE

Resolutions warning the public that crime may increase greatly if 305 patrolmen and 572 sergeants are taken from the Chicago police department, as recommended by Mayor Cermak, were adopted yesterday by the Chicago Patrolmen's Social, Athletic and Efficiency club. "The unsettled condition of the city may have a tendency to invite an undesirable element," the resolutions said. "Hoodlums may take advantage of the times and wage war that may get beyond the control of a curtailed law enforcement body."

VETERAN CONDUCTOR DIES.

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 21.—William E. Oakley, 61, died yesterday following a brief illness. He had been a conductor on the Louisville and Nashville railroad passenger trains of the Evansville division for the last 27 years.

Two Boy Thieves Caught by Judge After Chase

Two boys accused of smashing automobile headlights to steal the electric bulbs were captured last night after a chase by Judge Francis Borrelli and his son, Bruce J. Borrelli, near their home at 6800 Bennett avenue. The prisoners were taken to the Woodlawn station. They are Joseph Brucato, 13 years old, 240 West 26th street, and Paul Puleo, 16, of 225 West 23d street.

Takes Her Purse and Dog Out for Airing; Loses $405

Mrs. Frances M. Branyan, 514 East 77th street, decided last night when she took her dog out for an airing that it was dangerous to leave her money in the house. So she took $405 with her in her purse. At 77th street and St. Lawrence avenue a man of swarthy complexion seized the purse and ran away with it.

MARKET OWNER ROBBED.

Harry Port, owner of a market at 234 North Cicero avenue, and his son, 16 years old, were stopped near their home at 3331 Potomac avenue by two bandits Saturday night and robbed of $177.

MURRAY TOSSES HIS HAT IN RING FOR PRESIDENT

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Gov. William H. Murray today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for President.

The gaunt "Alfalfa Bill" made the announcement to newspapers in a brief statement at the governor's mansion.

Wearing a black slouch hat pulled well over his eyes, the governor handed out the statement. Gov. Murray declared he would "make no trades, form no combination, nor compromise on any principle for delegates or for the nomination.

"If successful my hands will be free of baneful influences," he said. "I feel reasonably certain of the election if nominated."

Leaving here tomorrow afternoon, Murray will speak at Indianapolis, Monticello, Marion, and Gary, then return to Indianapolis for a state Democratic convention.

CELEBRATE TODAY ON BIRTHDAY OF FIRST PRESIDENT

Many Events to Mark Washington Bicentennial

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Solemnly but not somberly, Chicago today marks the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of the man who became "father of his country." Keyed to the holiday spirit, this metropolis and all its environs will greet the day with flags fluttering; with drum and fife and bugle waking the echoes of patriotic tunes; with plays and pageants and parades, luncheons, dinners, and oratory; with a far flung program of commemoration of George Washington, ranging from the reverence of church services to the gaiety of the ballroom floor.

Concurrently throughout the country and the world various races will join in the tribute to our first President, each in its own tongue and after its own custom. Yet the actual date itself marks but the peak of a six months' observance of the bicentennial which is to close on Thanksgiving day.

Start on Religious Note.

Locally, today's celebration will start on a religious note, with the 8 o'clock service at St. James Episcopal church, at which hundreds of men and boys of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew are expected to gather to pay their respects to Washington the Episcopalian. Bishop George Craig Stewart will be the celebrant.

Simultaneously in many cities of the United States, similar gatherings will be held in other Episcopal churches.

At a breakfast to be served in the Allerton house following the service Bishop Stewart will address the organization.

Weather predictions last night indicated that a lower temperature might affect somewhat the plans many Chicagoans had made to enjoy the double holiday afforded by the proximity of the anniversary to Sunday. Thousands, however, took advantage of the opportunity to make brief jaunts out of the city. The weather yesterday was ideal and the highways were crowded.

Schools Close Today.

Schools, banks, postoffices, and many business houses will be closed the entire day. The Chicago Board of Trade, the Stock, Curb, and Mercantile exchanges will cease to operate, although the live stock exchange will do business as usual. Only one delivery of mail will be made during the day.

At noon today the Advertising Men's post of the American Legion will observe the bicentennial with a luncheon at the Hotel Sherman at which the speaker will be Maj. George F. Lee, veteran of both the Spanish and the world wars. Theatrical stars will also appear.

Also scheduled for the noon hour is the program of the Covenant club, featured by a luncheon at which Prof. George L. Scherger, historian and authority on the life and character of Washington, will give the address. Musical numbers will be presented following his talk.

Outstanding on the calendar of this evening's events are the dinner of the Illinois society, Sons of the American Revolution, at the Hotel La Salle; the Polish American Washington Bicentennial program at the Holy Trinity High school auditorium; the exercises of Chesterfield post number 695 of the American Legion at Tuley park fieldhouse, 90th street and South Park avenue; the Washington program under auspices of the Cook County Federation of Women's clubs, and the joint observance of the anniversary by the Knights of Pythias and Pythian Sisters, at 32 West Randolph street at 8 o'clock.

Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom will be one of a trio of speakers at the Sons of the American Revolution dinner at 6:30 o'clock. Prof. Franklyn B. Snyder of Northwestern university and the Rev. Dr. J. W. G. Ward of Oak Park will participate in a symposium on Washington as "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Judge John P. McGoorty of the Superior court will be the principal orator at the Chesterfield Legion post activities at 8 p. m. Others scheduled to speak are Gus Akerlund, commander of the post; Dr. T. S. Schmillen, Mrs. Louise Oldshue, Turner C. Chandler, Abel De Haan, and Joseph C. Tufo. Cooperating groups are the Chesterfield Legion auxiliary, the Commercial club, Women's club, Improvement association, and the Savings and Loan association, all of Chesterfield.

The Odd Fellows' lodges of Chicago will celebrate all day at 6318 Yale avenue. Chairman Ransom E. Walker of the Illinois grand lodge announces that the chief speaker will be William E. Brooks of Toronto, grand secretary of the Odd Fellows' order in Canada.

Yesterday afternoon a colorful service in the University of Chicago c[illegible] honoring George Washington was held under the joint auspices of the Illinois chapter, Society of Colonial Dames, the Sons of Colonial Wars, and the Mayflower society. Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, dean of the chapel, delivered the address.

Legion Post at Church.

Members of Rogers Park post of the American Legion attended services yesterday morning in a body at St. Paul's-by-the-Lake Episcopal church, and witnessed the annual flag presentation services of their group. The custom established of giving a flag each year to some worthy institution was centered this year on the church, and the post auxiliary joined with other parish organizations in the service.

Pulaski drum and bugle corps sponsored a Washington bicentennial program last night at the National auditorium, 2022 Carolina street. Boy Scouts, a Red Cross unit and other bands took part.

CHICAGOAN CHERISHES 1783 NEWSPAPER WITH WASHINGTON ADDRESS

A copy of the New York Morning Post, dated Nov. 7, 1783, containing the complete text of George Washington's farewell address to his soldiers upon his retirement from the service is one of the cherished possessions of William Houser Gray, retired capitalist of 2478 Lake View avenue.

The newspaper, which Mr. Gray has had encased in glass to prevent further crumbling, is of the 4 column, 4 page size of the day, smaller than a modern tabloid. Although Washington's address to the armies was delivered on Nov. 2, 1783, it was not printed in the Post until Nov. 7. A small type headline, one column in width, reads: "General Washington's Farewell Orders to the Armies of the United States."

The farewell address to the soldiers, in which Washington expressed his gratitude for their valor, is not to be confused with his farewell address to the people, delivered on Sept. 17, 1796.

Mr. Gray, who is 85 years old, has had possession of the newspaper 64 years, having received it from his grandfather, Amos Gray, whose father, James Gray, a colonel in the army of the revolution, preserved it.

EUROPE EXALTS WASHINGTON ON BICENTENARY EVE

Joins U. S. Groups in Celebrations.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Feb. 21.—George Washington's personality and his sense of proportion were invoked tonight by Count Giuseppe Volpi as nostrums for settling the economic and political disturbances of the world. Count Volpi, a former Italian minister of finance, spoke before the Italo-American society, observing the Washington bicentenary.

He said that the best way to celebrate Washington's birthday would be to return to the sense of proportion with regard to debts and reparations and with regard to the war in the orient.

"While the world is suffering from political and economic travail," he said, "the tragic bookkeeping of the world war poisons the life of all and piles difficulty on difficulty.

U. S. Ambassador Replies.

"The international relations of commerce and trade grow more difficult. The monetary situation of every country becomes more untenable bringing about artificial protective barriers and an unwilling and dangerous egotism which retards any possible settlement. It is a paradoxical and tragic conflict."

The American ambassador, John W. Garrett, replied briefly. "We do not forget," he said "that Italy's participation today is her own tribute to the greatness of Washington and what he has left to the whole world."

Hindenburg Exalts Washington.

BERLIN, Feb. 21.—(AP)—President von Hindenburg cabled President Hoover today that George Washington was an exemplary leader, immortal in history, who "with a sure hand guided the American ship of state through all its perils."

The bicentenary of Washington's birth tomorrow drew full audiences today at American churches and was the subject of radio addresses by Prof. Hermann Oncken, eminent historian, and others. Tomorrow, American Ambassador Frederic M. Sackett will preside at a banquet for the American colony at which Prof. Frederick Woodbridge of New York will be a speaker.

Day Observed in Paris.

PARIS, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The influence of French thought on American revolutionary leaders was stressed tonight at the Sorbonne by Norman Armour, counsellor of the American embassy, on the eve of the Washington bicentenary. The Paris Post of the American Legion earlier in the day placed wreaths on the statues of Washington, Lafayette and Franklin and at the home of Rochambeau.

Mrs. Linn, great-great-great-grandniece of the general, was greeted yesterday by a number of prominent Chicagoans at an informal reception.

COAL • HEAT • COSTS • LESS

$1,773.00
Coal's saving
on this home owner's fuel bills . . .

Accurate figuring leaves no doubt about the savings the owner of this bungalow at 2104 S. Austin Blvd. makes on his heating bills by burning coal.

During the past five years actual record shows his heating costs to have amounted to $791.05 with coal.

If he burned the fuel that next to coal is the most economical, it is fairly estimated that he would have spent $1,544.30.

If he burned the now fuel that has been piped into Chicago, it would cost him approximately $2,564.05.

So at a saving of $763.25 over the cost of fuel B and $1,773.00 over the cost of fuel C—enough to pay for a car or a long vacation or for the education of your children —this home owner has winter health and winter safety with coal.

Important to his saving is the fact that he buys his coal through a member of the Chicago Coal Merchants Association and makes certain of the full weight, the honest grading which are essential to any program of real economy in home heating.

Feel Old at 40?

Disturbed Sleep, Backache, Stiffness, Loss of Energy, Often Due to Kidney Acidity.

There are few things that sap your energy more, and make you look and feel years older, than functional kidney inactivity and excess acidity. These are also often the cause of other troublesome and worrisome complaints such as miserable Backache, Disturbed Sleep, Nervousness, Lumbago, Neuralgia, Sore Joints, Circles Under Eyes, Headaches, Muddy Complexion, Smarting, and Irritation.

To combat these conditions, when due to functional kidney inactivity, you really need two different kinds of medicine. First, you need a medicine to act as a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys, to help them in their functions of filtering and purifying the blood, thus reducing acidity. Second, you need another medicine to soothe and heal irritation and give nature a chance.

These two special kinds of medicine, in one package, known as Cystex, now may be had from your druggist under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. They are in tasteless tablet form, easy to take, and pleasant to young or old, yet work so fast they start circulating through the system in 11 minutes. Sufferers say they begin to feel marked improvement in 24 hours.

Your own druggist — the man you know is reliable—can tell you that these are established facts, and that Cystex (pronounced Siss-tex) is a splendid medicine, containing purest ingredients, which have proved a blessing to many of his customers.

This much is certain: If Cystex makes you feel years younger and stronger by combating these functional conditions, the small cost of 75c is a trifle, but if not completely satisfied, merely return the empty package and get your money back. Why suffer from delay and neglect? The guarantee protects you. Get Cystex from your druggist today.

CUSTER'S STAND ON PROHIBITION UPSETS BACKERS

Galesburg Statement Irks Wet Chicago Allies.

Wet Republican ward committeemen who had signified their intentions of supporting Omer N. Custer for governor appeared embarrassed yesterday over Custer's stand on prohibition. Eight of those listed as having promised Gov. Emmerson last month that they would accept Custer as their candidate gave various statements regarding Custer's speech at Galesburg on Saturday, the concensus being that the candidate had put them in a bad position with their constituents.

Some of Custer's supporters in Chicago expressed regrets over his statement: "Prohibition is not the most important issue. Until congress has acted I know nothing a state executive officer can do about it one way or the other."

Comment of Committeemen.

Some of the committeemen did not wish to be quoted. Those who gave their views on the Custer platform and their statements are as follows:

LOUIS B. ANDERSON, 2d ward—I think he could have gone on record in favor of giving the states some control of prohibition. I'm as wet as Lake Michigan, but I'm like Custer—I can't do anything about prohibition. However, I don't like to see any one pussyfooting, straddling or sidestepping the prohibition issue and throwing it into the lap of congress. Agencies such as are represented in him could go a long way towards influencing a change. The people are overwhelmingly against prohibition, and when some candidate says it's none of his business, they will not look with favor on him. However, our organization generally follows blindly the choice of the county organization, although that choice does not always represent the will of the people.

ELMER A. BROWN, 10th ward—I like him better for his stand. It is up to congress. I'm wet and I'm with him, but he leaves us in the cold with our wet voters.

King for an Outright Wet.

GEORGE D. KING, 12th ward—A dry candidate will not do so well in my ward. He won't get enough votes to wad a shotgun. He'll have to be wet before I support him. I have not yet decided whom I will support for governor.

ERNEST WITHALL, 15th ward—Custer's dry platform is the one thing our people are talking about today. I can't say until I talk it over with the members of our group whether we'll switch from Custer, but I don't think we'll change. We have been for Custer because we thought he was the best man.

WILLIAN H. REID, 16th ward—Custer is honest about it. He gave us the truth about his views and he'd be a shyster if he evaded. I think he'll express himself further as the campaign goes along. It might embarrass me to support a dry but Custer will carry my ward, wet or dry.

Metzger Support in Doubt.

ANDREW C. METZGER, 8th ward—I think he skipped over the question fine. I had thought he would be stronger against prohibition. Those who want liberal votes will have to be somewhat liberal. I'm wet and I don't know about supporting him. I know how Chicago stands on the wet and dry question, but perhaps Custer is right that Washington is the place to change the law. I wish some one would ask Custer whether he would sign or veto a bill similar to the O'Grady bill. I believe the search and seizure law should be repealed.

PAUL W. ROTHENBERG, 24th ward—There is a great deal of sense in Custer's statement that there is nothing the governor can do about prohibition. I don't want to quarrel with Mr. Custer but perhaps a movement could be initiated in our own state to amend the constitution of the United States. I'm in favor of repealing the prohibition law.

Hurt in Every Chicago Ward.

GEORGE HITZMAN, 36th ward—I'll go along with Custer because we can't all be skippers, but his statement will make a difference all over Chicago. I'm wet but I can support a dry. It's his fault, not mine. I was surprised at his announcement and I don't like it. It hurt him in every ward in Chicago. If a candidate is not wet he hasn't much of a chance. All these west side wards are wet.

"I shall not answer questionnaires nor make private pledges to individuals or to any organizations of any kind," he said.

REGISTERS DISMAY

MARY PICKFORD.

Mary Pickford, motion picture star, passed through Chicago yesterday morning en route to New York. She was unaccompanied, her husband, Douglas Fairbanks, being on his way to the south seas to make a new picture. Miss Pickford arrived on the Chief of the Santa Fé railroad.

FIREMEN SAVE FOUR TRAPPED IN BLAZING FLAT

Two Others Escape to an Adjoining Roof.

One girl was burned and she and three other persons were carried from the third floor of an apartment building at 1117-19 Christiana avenue yesterday after flames had destroyed the rear stairs and smoke had blocked their escape at the front.

Sidney Grabiner, 19 years old, laid a stepladder from a third floor window ledge to the roof of an adjoining building. He and Mrs. Diana Sears made their escape over that precarious bridge.

Firemen Perform Rescues.

Mrs. Mary Goldberg, Mrs. Sears' mother, was afraid to use that escape, and her screams for help were answered by Capt. Edward Bartke and firemen of Truck company 36, who carried her down a ladder. Other members of the fourth battalion entered the building and carried three other occupants down the stairs.

They were Mrs. J. Grabiner, aunt of Sidney, and her children, a son 16 years old, also named Sidney, and a daughter, Evelyn, 18 years old. They had attempted to escape by the rear stairs, but were driven back by flames which burned Evelyn severely about the legs.

They returned to their apartment and thrust their heads as far as they could from a window to avoid suffocation until firemen answered their cries and carried them down the front stairs through the smoke.

Fire Ties Up "L" Line.

Traffic on the south side "L" was tied up for three hours yesterday by a 5-11 fire which attacked a four story brick building at 1138 South Wabash avenue. The loss was estimated at $100,000.

The building was occupied by Underwood-Blankenship, Inc., wholesale furniture dealers. The fire apparently started in the basement, Fire Marshal Corrigan said. It spread through the building and the alarm was not given until passersby saw smoke pouring from windows.

The first alarm was sounded at 7:40 a. m. and was followed quickly by other calls which brought forty pieces of apparatus to the scene.

DROPS DEAD IN RESTAURANT.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY BARED BY NOTE OF WOMAN SEER

The bodies of a man and a woman, the latter dead from gas fumes and the former evidently shot and killed by the woman, were found last night in the woman's home at 2700 Normal avenue. They were Mrs. Edith Natalie Adams, 48 years old, amateur seer, astrologist and psychologist, and Jerry Perrault, 45 years old.

Mrs. Alma Conner, 70 years old, mother of Mrs. Adams, discovered the tragedy. She found her daughter dead in the gas filled kitchen. Later she came across a note directing her to her daughter's purse. In the pocketbook Mrs. Conner found a second note. In it Mrs. Adams wrote: "I killed Jerry Perrault two days ago and concealed his body beneath the bed on the third floor."

Deering street police were summoned. They found the body of Perrault beneath the bed of James Bennett, a roomer. He had been unaware of the slaying. Police learned that Mrs. Adams was a drug addict, and said they suspected Perrault, supposedly an addict also, of supplying her with narcotics. In Mrs. Adams' home police found hundreds of books on astrology and psychology. Detectives said the two deaths were cases of murder and suicide.

Later Bennett, 61 years old, was quizzed by Deering street police. He denied any knowledge of the killing. He admitted he and Mrs. Adams had lived together since 1913. He first met her in Meadville, Pa., in 1911, he said, and two years afterwards saw her again in Chicago. Bennett said that he deserted his wife and three children in Allentown, Pa., in 1910.

Chicago Woman Marks 92d Birthday Today

Numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren yesterday helped Mrs. Martha Lang observe her 92d birthday, which occurs today. A party was held at the home of her son, Frank Lang, 5224 Greenwood avenue. She has lived in Chicago seventy-seven years.

Mayor and Party Make Tour of Police Stations

Mayor Anton J. Cermak, his niece and a young man visited several police stations last night on a sight seeing tour. His first stop was at Des Plaines street where he served as court clerk twenty-five years ago. Desk Sergt. William Butler and Assistant Sergt. Frank Abrams showed the mayor and his party the squad room, offices and cell quarters. A number of the sixty-one prisoners recognized Mayor Cermak, and called his name. The mayor turned to one. "What can I do for you?" he asked. The prisoner answered promptly: "Just open this cell door and let me out." But the mayor smiled and passed on.

16 Patients Carried from Flaming Dearborn Hospital

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Sixteen patients were carried to safety today when fire threatened to destroy the General hospital in suburban Dearborn. The hospital, of thirty-five bed capacity, occupied a converted three story residence. Two floors were destroyed.

LABOR TO BRAKE DE VALERA'S USE OF IRISH POWER

Fianna Fail to Modify Policies.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Feb. 21.—With fifteen seats still to be heard from in the Irish Free State election, it is now certain that Eamon de Valera's Fianna Fail-Labor combination will have a majority in the new dail over President William F. Cosgrave's government group consisting of the League of Gael, Farmers' party, and independents.

Present figures give Fianna Fail, 65; Labor, 7; total, 72; the League of Gael, 49; independents, 13; Farmers, 4; total, 66. The total membership of the dail is 153, and when the speak does not vote this means 77 is needed for a majority. Out of the fifteen seats to be decided Fianna Fail may reasonably expect seven at least, so the majority is secure.

De Valera Tied by Labor.

Under these circumstances Dublin is speculating on the course to be followed by the new government. Whatever De Valera might wish to do did he have a free hand—and is only fair to say that he shows no sign of desiring to pursue an extremist policy—his hands are tied by the necessary Labor alliance.

There will be no denunciation of the treaty with England, as Labor has made perfectly clear that this will not be allowed. The labor watchword is to forget politics for the present and concentrate on economic reconstruction. It will not object to deletion of the oath of allegiance to King George from the constitution, but maintains, as does De Valera, that this is not an essential part of the treaty and that its deletion does not mean withdrawal from the British commonwealth of nations.

Fianna Fail lawyers maintain that in the treaty the oath is not obligatory but is optional. Since it was inserted in the constitution by the Free State legislature, they contend the legislature may delete it without violation of the treaty. They hold that the words of the treaty read that "the oath is to be taken" and not that the oath "shall" be taken.

Not to Denounce Treaty.

In any case De Valera himself and his chief lieutenant, Sean Lemass, make it clear that they have no intention of denouncing the treaty and seceding from the empire in the near future.

What may prove to be a serious snag will arise when De Valera deals with the young extremists. He is pledged to repeal the public safety act, under which a number of young republican "gunmen" are in prison. When these are turned loose they will demand that De Valera immediately carry out his old promises to cut loose from England.

Labor, however, will not allow him to do so, even if he is so inclined and those disappointed young men may prove as troublesome to him as they were to the present government. Many shrewd politicians today declared that he may have to think twice before repealing the act, or that if he does repeal it, he may have to reënact it before long.

Revive Coalition Talk.

De Valera professes to believe that removal of the oath will satisfy the extremists who will now have nothing to prevent them from entering the dail and adopting constitutional methods.

Further speculation is based on the slender character of the majority. Talk of a coalition in a few months is being revived. The present government party will look favorably on such a move but De Valera still declares there is no need for it and that he can govern alone.

The man most mentioned by advocates of coalition for president is Seumas Dillon, son of the late John Dillon, famous Irish leader. Dillon was elected as an independent but has never been closely identified with either of the major Free State parties and commands the respect of all.

He would also have the confidence of banks and business men of the community on whose support the national loans and the country's credit depends to a large extent.

Aid of Kingsford-Smith on Ocean Hop Hurt in Crash

MELBOURNE, Australia, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Charles T. P. Ulm, Australian aviator, who flew the Pacific ocean in 1928 with Wing Commander Charles Kingsford-Smith, was injured seriously today when his airplane crashed into high-tension wires on the way here from Sydney and fell to earth. J. A. Kerr, a passenger, was also injured.

19 LOS ANGELES PILOTS REFUSE TO OBEY UNION

A telegram was sent yesterday by the Chicago headquarters of the pilots' union to 19 Los Angeles pilots of the Century-Pacific airlines demanding that they repudiate a statement which they made on Saturday expressing satisfaction with their jobs. Los Angeles dispatches stated last night that the pilots on the coast would ignore the demand.

Twenty-two pilots of the Century Air lines here were discharged two weeks ago when they refused to accept a wage cut comparable to that which went into effect for Century-Pacific pilots last July. Both lines are subsidiaries of the Cord corporation.

Who wouldn't smile?

When a man buys a Rogers Peet suit for $25 or $35 (and the former price was from $75 down to $35) we wrap enough clothes-wear and satisfaction in the package to keep him smiling for months to come.

Consider what they are made of! Wool as pure as wool grows on a sheep. A fabric woven on looms of knowledge and absolute honesty! Hand-tailoring by men who are never urged to cut and sew in haste or to skimp on a single stitch! Style that becomes a man who dislikes the theatrical in dress but wants to be smart!

And these are suits we are selling at $25 and $35
(were $35 to $50) (were $55 to $75)

Is there any wonder that new customers come doubting and leave smiling—and old customers smile coming and going?

Stop in and see for yourself.

The Greatest of PIERCE-ARROW EIGHTS
priced as low as $2495 at Buffalo

THIS finest Eight ever built by Pierce-Arrow appeals irresistibly to all who want the utmost in an Eight, yet are not averse to sharing in the day's economies.

Nowhere in America, save in the Pierce-Arrow plants at Buffalo, could an Eight of such visible and invisible excellence be produced, because nowhere else is Pierce-Arrow precision equipment and hand craftsmanship duplicated.

You see the full fruit of this remarkable care in the incredibly smooth, scarcely audible power plant of this new Pierce-Arrow Eight — an engine which passes through 350 skilled hands and is subjected to nearly 100 inspections.

The lavish Pierce-Arrow attention to detail is impressively evident in every inch of this new Eight's chassis and bodies.

Where hand-craftsmanship still endures

Precision takes precedence over everything else in the construction of a Pierce Arrow. The faces of the engine bearings, for example, are actually shaved with a diamond pointed cutter to make them micrometrically exact. And in every other operation equivalent care is exercised.

SENATE TAKES UP ANTI-INJUNCTION BILL TOMORROW

Conservatives, Radicals to Clash Over Measure.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The conservative and radical elements will find themselves pitted against each other again next Tuesday when the senate, by previous agreement, begins consideration of the anti-injunction legislation long demanded by organized labor and long urged by radical and liberal members of congress.

This legislation is directed at limiting the powers of the courts of the United States sitting in equity from issuing injunctions in labor disputes. The actual measure is a bill sponsored by Senator George W. Norris, radical Republican of Nebraska. The bill is the product of extended hearings begun in the 70th congress; it is the scion of former measures which failed of apreval; it is, in large measure, the handiwork of law professors and attorneys known for their liberal turn of mind.

Hebert Bill Less Far Reaching.

The Norris bill will not enter the lists unchallenged, however. Proposed as a substitute—in many respects of the same general tenor but in many features considerably less far reaching—a bill introduced by Senator Felix Hebert [Rep., R. I.] is likely to attract the sympathies and support of conservative members.

Still a third bill touching upon the same subject of labor injunctions will not be before the senate. A house measure introduced by Representative F. H. La Guardia [Radical Rep., N. Y.] carries the clause found objectionable in previous bills, to limit "property" in federal cases in equity to tangible and transferable property.

Neither the Norris bill nor the Hebert substitute contains this provision. Conservative opinion is not the only adversary with which the anti-injunction bills will have to contend; there also is the question of constitutionality and this is an issue likely to draw some of the foremost members of the radical bloc to the side of the opposition.

It is on this very point that the Norris bill goes considerably farther than the Hebert measure.

The Norris bill provides that all persons charged with indirect contempt for violation of a restraining order or injunction shall have the right to demand a trial by jury. The Hebert bill would limit this provision to labor disputes.

Fix Penalty to Meet Own Ideas.

In his report on the bill from the judiciary committee of which he is chairman, Senator Norris concurs in the desirability of limiting the court's power to punish for contempt with an argument which concludes:

"If an attack is made upon the character or the conduct of the judge by a writer in a newspaper, for instance, is it fair, is it compatible with our idea of jurisprudence that the judge against whom the attack is made should preside at the trial of the offender? Suppose a judge were assaulted on the street by a common thug. Our procedure would not permit this judge to sit at the trial of the person charged with the assault and battery. He would be tried under the laws provided by the legislature.

General Law Not Applicable.

"In an injunction case the general laws of the legislature would not apply. The person assaulted would not only preside at the trial but he would fix the punishment without regard to statute but in accordance with his own idea as to what the punishment should be."

The contempt section is, perhaps, considerably less of an innovation than the declaration of the public policy of the United States with respect to organized labor which forms the basis of both the Norris and Hebert measures. Essentially alike, the two declarations differ in the Norris bill's preoccupation with the worker to the exclusion of the employer, while the Hebert bill seeks to define the complementary rights of both.

"Under prevailing economic conditions, a single employé is helpless in dealing with an employer, is ordinarily dependent on his daily wage for the maintenance of himself and his family, is unable to resist arbitrary and unfair treatment, and, whereas, it is essential.

Deal on Basis of Equality.

"[A] That he shall be free to associate with his fellow workers and to form unions which will afford him and them the opportunity to deal on a basis of equality with those by whom they are employed.

"[B] That they may share equitably in the product of labor and capital.

"[C] That both the employer and the employé shall have full freedom of association, self-organization, and designation of representatives of their own choosing, to negotiate the terms of employment free from any interference, restraint or coercion in their efforts toward mutual aid or protection."

Both bills declare any act or promise violative of the adopted policy to be outside the bounds of equitable relief. Both bills outlaw "yellow dog" contracts as the basis for a restraining order or injunction. Both bills prohibit a federal court to enjoin employés from striking or belonging to a labor union.

In providing that no federal court shall issue an injunction except upon findings of certain facts, the Norris bill limits the scope of the injunction power to cases in which unlawful acts have been committed and will be continued unless restrained. The Hebert bill includes the threatening of unlawful acts.

Both bills give the defendant in a contempt proceeding where the contempt arose from an attack on the character or conduct of a judge the right to a change of venue.

NATIONS GRASP AT TARIFF AIDS, SURVEY SHOWS

Commerce Report Covers Trade Difficulties.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The nations of the world were pictured today as having grasped at virtually whatever tariff straw presented itself in their efforts to fight off financial disaster during the second year of the economic depression.

The picture was drawn by Henry Chalmers, chief of the commerce department's division of foreign tariffs, in a survey of tariff and trade control developments during 1931 which appeared today in the department's weekly commerce reports.

"With overcapacity—if not actual overproduction — shrinking markets, falling prices, increased unemployment, unbalanced budgets, frozen credits, and general financial uncertainty afflicting practically every country on the globe," said Mr. Chalmers, "many governments have resorted to whatever trade control measures that promised at least to alleviate their particular immediate difficulties."

More Revenue Needed.

The motive of protection for home industry, which has so long been dominant in moves to curtail imports, was frequently overshadowed in 1931, according to Mr. Chalmers, by the need for "increasing governmental revenues, correcting adverse trade balances, protecting currency values, or maintaining the government's financial solvency altogether."

"To attain these ends," he declared, "the trade control measures taken during the year have included not only increases in duties but quota limitations, restrictions on imports in other forms, exchange controls, and even gold embargoes, with all their consequences."

Exports Show Decline.

The influence of the depression in giving rise to "these measures of extreme nationalism and apprehensive trade restrictions" was accentuated, according to Mr. Chalmers, by a "general shrinkage of exports," and was "aggravated by the financial difficulties of governments, which spread rapidly after midsummer of 1931."

The commerce department expert declared that present indications pointed to a further contraction of international trade in 1932, and asserted that should such be the case, many markets of "primary interest" to American exporters would be affected.

BOY SHOT DOWN WHEN HE FLEES FROM POLICEMAN

Chester Lakowski, 19 years old, of 4847 Ada street was shot in the side and critically wounded early this morning by Policeman George Jordan of the Stockyards station when he fled after being ordered to halt. The shooting occurred outside the youth's home. Earlier the police had raided an alleged disorderly flat beneath the flat occupied by the Lakowskis. Florence Stapleton, 17 years old, of 1428 West 49th place, and Anthony King, 21, of 1426 West 49th place, were seized. Jordan was assigned to the flat to watch for Lakowski, who, police understood, frequented the place.

Lakowski appeared after a while. Policeman Jordan tried to seize him, but he ran away. The policeman fired one shot, the bullet hitting Lakowski in the side and emerging from the abdomen. He was taken to the Bridewell hospital. Police said he has a police record.

Wife Kills Her Husband as He Lies Down to Sleep

George Yarrington, 37 years old, a bellboy at the Medinah Athletic club, died early this morning in the Passavant hospital of a bullet wound received yesterday at the hands of his wife, Elizabeth. Roy Patterson, 11 year old son of Mrs. Yarrington by a former marriage, told police that his mother shot Yarrington as he lay down to sleep after a quarrel over another woman. Her story is that the revolver was discharged accidentally. She is held.

THE BROTHERS CASE.

The decision of the Supreme court affirming the judgment in the case of the state versus Leo V. Brothers will have important consequences beyond that of the punishment of Brothers. The search for the killer of Lingle amid the shadows of the underworld was one of the most difficult in the history of crime in America, and it was made more difficult by efforts to obstruct and defeat it by influences not of the underworld but professing respectability. In spite of these difficulties Brothers was tried with such regard for the law and for his rights that his conviction, though vigorously assailed, has withstood the review of the Supreme court and is confirmed by all but two of the justices who base dissent on a point of procedure.

The result must be to demonstrate that justice can be attained even under such discouraging conditions as seemed to protect Brothers. It will not seem so easy to kill and disappear to safety in the jungle of the underworld. Brothers would undoubtedly have escaped but for the exceptional persistence and skill of pursuit and the special care in trial to avoid the pitfalls which shrewd or unscrupulous practice digs for the prosecutor. The case from start to finish points the way to a more effectual prosecution of criminals. Present means and methods lack concentration and persistence. Police work must not only be protected from political or other influence, but must be organized so as to permit handling by specialists who are not taken off the trail until it ends.

Brothers was convicted, like most criminals, on conflicting testimony. We should have few convictions by agreement on the facts. But the court says of the evidence, what we believe any unbiased and careful examination will support, that the verdict clearly follows the weight of the evidence. "The record contains no error," says the court, "sufficient to disturb the verdict, which appears to have been justified by convincing evidence showing the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt."

The moderate penalty fixed by the jury is explained on the theory that it was a compromise with doubt as to the degree of Brothers' guilt. This suggests the hope that, confronted with a long term in the penitentiary, Brothers may assist the discovery and punishment of those who hired him and failed to save him from punishment. Brothers did not kill Lingle as a private venture. No one doubts he was only a tool, chosen because he was penniless and unknown. Yet this penniless and obscure gangster was able to procure the ablest professional defense and fight an expensive battle in the courts. Why? Who paid his bills? If we can find them we shall be able to punish the men who were the real springs of the crime for which Brothers is punished and who undoubtedly are powerful agents of lawlessness in the community.

REDISTRIBUTING WEALTH.

Gov. La Follette's tax plan for redistributing wealth is taking effect promptly. The first important proof is in the redistribution of one of the large and most usefully engaged fortunes of the state, which is about to be redistributed to Washington, D. C.; Tryon, N. C., and points east. We refer to the wealth of Mr. J. C. Kimberly, president of the Neenah Paper company, who has announced, somewhat cryptically, that he has withdrawn his residence from Wisconsin because he prefers to live elsewhere. Pressed for explanation, Mr. Kimberly is quoted as saying he wanted to live where they weren't always shooting at the rich and where the tax program was not so terrifying.

Mr. Kimberly paid a Wisconsin income tax last year of something more than $21,000 on an income of more than $300,000. His chief interest always has been the paper industry of the Fox river valley, and it is a fair assumption that a considerable portion of his large income was reinvested in Wisconsin in the industry in which he has always been a leader. His wealth, it seems now, has been effectively redistributed away from Wisconsin.

The plan has infinite possibilities. Next some astute politician may devise a tax plan to redistribute the farmers. Some counties now have too few, and the encroachments of the cities have reduced the needs and opportunities for farmers in others. The farmers always have complained about their taxes, too, although, strangely enough, they have been more inclined to blame Mr. Kimberly for them than they have Gov. La Follette. It seems unreasonable.

And there could be a redistribution of merchants and bankers and the cities and the utilities, but they already seem more or less on their way to that. Redistribute everybody and return to the forest primeval.

More seriously, the removal of J. C. Kimberly, to say nothing of his fortune and the considerable share of the state tax he bears, is a heavy loss to Wisconsin. It is most serious, because it is apparently typical of a tendency, and the news of the Neenah manufacturer's change of residence is too likely to be followed by other announcements. Some of them will let their grievances be known, and others will withdraw quietly, and the first to notice their absence will be the tax assessor.

An economic program which first fixes a huge expenditure and then sets out to levy a tax to meet it will find only one way to offset the absence of men and fortunes like Mr. Kimberly's. That is to spread the tax upon the lower classifications, and these already are paying all that their means will bear. In the rich year of 1929 there were only 15,672 citizens of Wisconsin with taxable incomes of more than $5,000. The contribution of these few citizens to the maintenance of the state has been an important factor in its wealth. With the removal of many of them, an unpleasant factor of Gov. La Follette's redistribution plan will be a redistribution of the tax burden upon the backs of the small income class, most of whom now feel they are carrying too much.

There is evidence that the golden goose, if it escapes killing, plans to migrate, and right now.

Alone of all the radical proposals, one virtue is apparent in the redistribution of wealth plan, and that is that it works. And how!

CUSTER'S STAND.

The platform on which Omer N. Custer has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor contains an equivocation, a straddle, on prohibition. Mr. Custer holds that nothing can be done to remedy the ills that have grown up under the repressive dry laws unless it is done outside Illinois.

His general attitude toward Chicago and its problems also is most unsatisfactory. He asserts that he will support a legislative reapportionment only if it takes a part of their constitutional rights from Chicago voters. His platform further indicates a desire to continue the bleeding of Chicago to build bond issue highways—in reality private roads—for the great landowners downstate.

These stands of Mr. Custer make it impossible for THE TRIBUNE to support him.

BRANCH LINES.

There is scarcely a sizable railroad in the United States which is not obliged to operate dozens of unprofitable branch lines. These lines were built before the days of good roads and motor trucks. Most of the branch lines no doubt were fairly profitable until 1912 or thereabouts. Since then the revenue from these lines has dropped rapidly until today the cost of maintaining the branches constitutes a heavy drain upon railroad income.

The sums which are lost on the branch lines must be made up somewhere, and the only place they can be made up is on the main lines. Freight and passenger rates for main line hauls are therefore higher than they would be if the branch lines were abandoned. That fact, in turn, has cost the railroads a good deal of business which they could hold against the competition of trucks if railroad rates could be lowered. As long as the interstate commerce commission refuses to let the railroad managements, in their own discretion, abandon branch lines, railroads will be obliged to surrender main line business which they could hold.

The branch line business is lost to the railroads permanently. They cannot compete successfully with motor service for either freight or passengers. The main line business has been lost needlessly. The railroad ought to be a far more efficient carrier for long distances than the motor truck can ever be, if only because each truck must have its driver, while a half dozen men can handle a train carrying as much as a hundred trucks.

The law that a railroad could not abandon a branch without permission had something to justify it a generation ago, when the railroad was the only reliable means of transport. That is no longer true. It is also no longer true that the railroads need the branch lines to supply them with freight to haul. The freight comes to the railroad in trucks, and whether the trucks travel two miles or twenty makes little difference in this day of hard roads.

Editorial of the Day

A WEARY CLERICAL CRUSADER.

[Brooklyn Eagle.]

Canon William Sheafe Chase has retired from Christ church on Bedford avenue, after holding the pulpit there for twenty-six years. His has been the experience of a clerical crusader, who found few to follow him in his various campaigns. He leaves Brooklyn to give his time wholly to the International Reform association in Washington, but his parish gives him the title of "Rector Honorarius" and he is to have an apartment in the Christ church rectory at his disposal as long as he lives, along with a $600 a year denominational pension.

An indefatigable publicist, Dr. Chase began his crusading in Brooklyn with an attack on Sunday shows at the Amphion and the Novelty in the eastern district. He followed this up with volleys aimed at Sunday football, Sunday baseball and race track betting. It was in 1903 that he ran up against Mr. Justice Marean with a telephoned "interview" in the New York Tribune reflecting on the justice because of an injunction he had granted against the police department. The clergyman did not know that this was a temporary injunction and had been dissolved before the interview was printed. Justice Marean called him to court, tried him for "criminal contempt," convicted him and then suspended sentence. No appeal was possible, and Dr. Chase could get no legal vindication.

Two years after that, in 1910, Dr. Chase registered as a "lobbyist" in Albany, as that seemed to be his only way of urging legislation in the interest of morality. The same year he was ejected from the floor of the assembly.

Earnestly Dr. Chase fought against what he regarded as the immoral effect of the movies. Earnestly he advocated a federal divorce law. In 1924 his struggle to have Firpo, an alien prize fighter, deported from America and to stop the Wills-Firpo battle in Jersey City compelled attention, though they were in vain.

When the prohibitionists started out to prevent Al Smith from becoming President, Dr. Chase was in the van. No one was happier than he over Hoover's election. He had looked upon this also as a moral issue.

Nowhere in Brooklyn, probably nowhere in any large city, could a crusader on so many lines have built up a church and made it prosperous. But the personality of the rector did not wholly account for the gradual decadence of Christ church, which had had something like 1,200 listed parishioners under the Rev. Dr. James H. Darlington, later bishop of Harrisburg, as rector. Dr. Chase called his section of the city "the most foreign in all New York." He held that it needed the same sort of work as our missions in China and Japan. He saw believers in an older religion than his own coming in as neighbors, and he could only think of them as pagans, which was for him a grave misfortune.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

WHY GEORGE WILL TURN OVER SEVERAL TIMES TODAY.

ORATOR (with dry leanings): George Washington, were he alive today, would be heart and soul in favor of the 18th amendment, the Volstead act, the Jones 5 & 10 law, and all other beneficent measures which seek the salvation, the moral uplifting, and the purity of America. Why do I say that? Because I know! Because I can prove it! When Washington was President the demons who drink rum became so insolent, so drunken with vile intoxicating alcoholic liquor, that in Pennsylvania they openly defied the government, just as the speakeasies and those who serve cocktails at their dinners today are now doing. What did George Washington do? (A voice: "I'll bite, what did George do?") My friends, I will tell you what George Washington did! He sent the great army of the United States against the rum rebels! Yes, marshals and prohibition enforcement officers were not enough for Washington in his noble efforts to stamp out the horrible habit of drinking rum and whisky, light wine and beer. He sent the whole United States army and Old Demon Rum was crushed! (Loud applause.)

M M M

ORATOR (with wet proclivities): My friends, this is the anniversary of the birth of the greatest American of all times, George Washington! As we revere his memory today let us ask, How would he stand on the liquor question if he were here today? Need I tell you! As you all know, Washington not only drank liquor himself but ordered rum served to his soldiers in the Revolutionary War. And he manufactured whisky in his own stillhouse at Mount Vernon. And sold it. And invited Tom Jefferson over when he tapped a nice fresh barrel of old Jamaica rum. (Demonstration lasting five minutes.) If Washington had been alive and in office during the last decade this country would not now face the fact that prohibition has cost us fifteen billions of dollars! Washington was not a fanatic; he was not opposed to water—in its place. He gladly crossed over to Trenton on water, the water of the Delaware river, to lick the Hessians, but when he got back home he started up the old still again. (Loud and prolonged cheering.)

M M M

ORATOR (opposed to the League of Nations): Ah, if the great, the immortal Washington were among us today, how would he stand in regard to the League of Nations? Need I ask? There are his own burning words: "Beware of foreign entanglements!" That's what he said. When the French wanted us to join them in their revolution in payment of the gratitude we owed them for the French army at Yorktown, what did Washington say? He said: "Keep out of Europe; we have troubles enough of our own!" (Frenzied applause. The bands break into "Yankee Doodle" and the audience knocks over the seats and marches around the hall three times.)

M M M

ORATOR (in favor of the League of Nations): Yes, my friends, if George Washington were among us today he would favor our joining the great League of Nations that will bring peace to every nation on the globe. (A voice: "What about China?") I know that George Washington would be in favor of the United States joining the League of Nations because when we were losing out in the Revolution he worked desperately for an alliance or a league, or what you might call it, with Spain and France to unite with America against England! And, finally, when the Revolution was all but lost, it was the League of Nations of that day, France joined with the United States, that compelled the surrender of Yorktown and the defeat and humiliation of King George the Third! And so I say, without fear of successful contradiction, that if Washington were alive today he would be in favor of the second League of Nations, the one that is now in session in Switzerland, just as he was in favor of a league of nations in the dark days of the Revolution! (Tremendous cheers and cries of "That's right!")

M M M

ORATOR (strong for government bureaus): George Washington today, were he here in the flesh, would favor the creation and maintenance of those magnificent organizations we have in Washington designed to give help, education, aid, advice, and sympathy to all classes of our population, men, women, and children. I know, because in every antique shop in this country and in thousands of homes you will find an authentic George Washington bureau! Yes, a bureau that was used by George Washington himself. They are everywhere, scattered all over this great land. And therefore I say that if George Washington were here now he would enthusiastically favor all the great beneficent bureaus we have in the city of Washington today! (The audience leaps to its feet and cheers for six minutes.)

M M M

ORATOR (dead against government bureaus): Washington, were he alive today, would condemn with all the force of his great character the multifarious skyscraping bureaus today at the nation's capital, and which are millstones around the necks of every taxpayer in this great country. The proof that Washington would be opposed to bureaus is that he himself advised with the French engineer who laid out the city of Washington. He said where to put the capitol, where to put the White House, where to put the beautiful avenues and parks. But he did NOT say, "Put a bureau on that corner and put another bureau there and jam government bureaus all up and down A, B, and C streets, as well as D, E, F, G, H, I, J, and all the rest of the alphabet, as well as on 1st street, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, and so on and on." George Washington intended the nation's capital to be the nation's capital, and not a conglomeration of buildings housing tens of thousands of bureaucrats. When Washington wanted to fight the British, he fought 'em! When he wanted to marry a rich widow, he married one! When he wanted to quit the presidency after two terms, he quit! If he had wanted bureaus, he'd had 'em! But, my friends and fellow citizens, he didn't! That's the answer. (Loud and prolonged cheering. A voice near the microphone shouts, "Attaboy, George!")

THE GROWTH OF SCHOOL CHILDREN.

PHYSICIANS have never been satisfied with the nutrition work done in school, in which the pupils were weighed and measured, and those found below a certain standard labeled "underweight" and treated in accordance with rules for underweights. Their criticism was that such standards took no account of racial differences, and variation in size of bones and in bodily conformations. Under the scheme some children were stigmatized who should not have been, and some spoiled their digestion, as well as their outlook on life, trying to make a grade that to them was unnatural.

This movement gave way to one based on the theory that if a child is normal and in good health, he will grow in height and weight at about a certain rate, and with reasonable consistency. This plan was an improvement over the first but it, too, had some shortcomings. Both plans were of service in several ways, one of which was that physicians began to study the height, weight, and build of children far more closely than they had previously done.

Now Drs. W. P. Lucas and H. B. Pryor propose a method of measurement which they term the "width-length index." They carefully measure the width of the hips and the length, from the top of the head to the soles. The first gives the width; the second the length. The index is obtained by dividing the width by the length. This method does not take into consideration race, growth peculiarities, and some other angles, but it has virtues. It does throw light on body type, a subject that is being studied by Drs. Stockard, Bakwin, and Draper, and that seems to promise much.

Drs. Lucas and Pryor find proof that Stockard, Draper, and others are right in dividing people into two great types—the linear and the lateral.

Those of the linear type are long and narrow; those of the lateral, broad and disposed to be short. Those of the first type are prone to the following disorders: tuberculosis of the bowels, enlarged glands of the neck, enlarged tonsils and adenoids, influenza and colds, tuberculosis, melancholia, nervousness, fevers, appendicitis, intestinal troubles, gastric ulcer, anemia, rheumatism, diphtheria, and scarlet fever. They are apt to escape those disorders to which the broad-short people are especially susceptible.

The disorders to which the second group are susceptible are: heart disease, chronic nephritis, arteriosclerosis, aneurysm, apoplexy, paralysis, diabetes, bladder trouble, hernia, liver trouble, gall stones, gall bladder trouble, and hemorrhoids. Conversely, the people of this group are apt to escape the disorders that the people of the other group claim for their own. Both lists represent generalizations, and if they are to be regarded as the rule there must be many exceptions.

SIMPLE OLD REMEDY.

W. F. N. writes: To get speedy relief and help cure a cold I have found by cutting an end of a lemon off, sprinkling salt on it, and taking a suck of it every once in a while it will do wonders in most cases. By passing along the above simple remedy you will receive the blessing of nearly every one that tries it.

REPLY.

TREATING CHILBLAINS.

T. C. S. writes: As a boy living a frontier life I had for several years ague, itch, and chilblains. The ague and itch during their attacks were most agreeable compared to the chilblains, which gave the sensation of a thousand mosquitoes or fleas all injecting poison into my feet at the same time. I was told to make a strong brine of common salt and for three or more consecutive evenings soak my feet in the brine (made as hot as I could stand it) for half an hour or more. I am now past 80 and have never had chilblains since using the hot brine remedy.

BOILS AND PIMPLES.

Mrs. A. R. S. writes: Will the elimination of sweets, fat meats, and greases from one's diet do away with an acid condition, prevent boils, and help do away with pimples?

REPLY.

Acid condition, boils, and pimples are something of a conglomeration. Sweets, fat meats, and greases make up another conglomeration of sometimes unrelated items.

In the prevention of pimples, diet has a somewhat minor place. It is of less importance in boils. It may be of importance in acidosis and acid condition, whatever that is.

"BUFFALO BOX" HAZARD.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—[Friend of the People.]—A city water pipe located in front of our home extends about ten or twelve inches above the level of the ground, and has been the cause of several slight accidents, because it cannot be seen at night. Could you tell us what department to report this to so that it may be lowered to ground level before any accident of a more serious nature occurs, or perhaps you would be kind enough to report it for us?

C. F. Z.

Relative to a buffalo box which extends ten or twelve inches above the level of the ground in front of the writer's home, we wish to advise you that this buffalo box was adjusted to curb and grade by the north district, water pipe extension division, some days ago.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

CHINA-JAPAN WAR, 1894

LONDON, Aug. 4.—A Times dispatch from Tientsin dated Aug. 2 says: "The preamble of an imperial edict just issued recites China's claims in Corea, its hundred years of suzerainty of that country, and the constant assistance it has rendered the vassal kings to subdue rebellions. China, it continues, recently sent forces to Corea with this object in view. Japan, without right, also sent troops and refused to withdraw them. It has further sunk a transport carrying Chinese soldiers and its action has been condemned by other powers. The emperor places all the military authorities under Viceroy Li Hung Chang, who will protect the rights of the empire. He also orders the capture and destruction of Japanese ships wherever found."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 4.—Official notification of a battle between the Japanese land forces and the Chinese in Corea was received at the Japanese legation here from the foreign office at Tokio. The telegram stated that on July 29 a portion of Japanese troops at Seoul marched against a much superior force of Chinese entrenched at Shang Yeng. A battle ensued and after heavy fighting the Chinese were put completely to rout and many prisoners and a large amount of munitions of war were captured by the Japanese. On the morning of the 30th the Japanese marched against Asan, where the fight between the Japanese and Chinese resulted in a loss of 2,000 Japanese. It is the opinion of legation officials here that reports from Chinese sources of the defeat of the Japanese at Asan are probably grossly exaggerated.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 4.—Another long dispatch from Minister Dun at Tokio gives the text of a notice by the Japanese minister of foreign affairs to the foreign representatives at Tokio concerning the differences between the two oriental nations. It says: "The Japanese government having exhausted every honorable means to bring about a just and lasting settlement of the differences existing between Japan and China and those efforts having proved wholly unavailing, the undersigned has the honor to announce to you that a state of war exists between Japan and China."

28 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 22, 1904.

ST. PETERSBURG.—There is authority which prohibits doubt of the veracity of the report that engagements have taken place on the Yalu river resulting in Russian advance guards being driven back by the Japanese with losses estimated at 2,500 lives. Whether this means those who fell on the Yalu or whether it includes the entire Russian losses since the beginning of the war is not exactly clear. But one thing is true: For days past there have been ugly rumors of Russian mishaps on land. There is high military authority for the statement that the army was not ready for war and that the commissariat has broken down. Trans-Caucasian troops are being mobilized and ordered to occupy the frontiers of Turkestan and Persia.

CHEFOO.—Tens of thousands of Japanese are advancing by forced marches from various parts of Corea on the Yalu river. Severe fighting is expected shortly.

ST. PETERSBURG.—Permission for Russia's Black sea fleet to pass the Dardanelles is reported to have been given by Turkey. This is said to have caused great alarm in England and may explain the reports of the haste with which the British fleet, including the reserves, is being mobilized.

SAN DOMINGO.—United States marines from the cruiser Newark and the training ship Columbia have fought a three hour battle with insurgents here and routed them without losing a man, killed or wounded. The war vessels shelled the rebels while 400 marines engaged in the battle.

CHICAGO.—William Stewart, father of Graeme Stewart, died of heart disease at his home, 623 Dearborn avenue, at the age of 79. He came to Chicago in 1850.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 22, 1916.

NEW YORK.—American citizens who have booked passage on the French liner Espagne, scheduled to sail from this port for Bordeaux, France, on Feb. 24, have received anonymous letters calling attention to the new German submarine policy and warning them not to embark, according to information received by officials of the British consulate in this city.

ROME.—In raids over the province of Brescia and toward Milan, Austrian airplanes today killed four persons and wounded five. Only slight material damage was done. Two persons were killed at Desenzano, one wounded at Salo, and two killed and four wounded at Trezzo sull' Adda. The victims were all civilians.

PARIS.—An official report dealing with aerial activity, issued by the ministry of war, follows: "A Zeppelin, proceeding from St. Menehould toward the south, was shelled by a section of auto cannon at Revigny. Struck by an incendiary shell, the Zeppelin fell in flames in the neighborhood of Brabant-le-Rol."

LONDON.—The Russians have occupied the entire Lake Van district, the Turks retiring southward and even evacuating Bitils, according to a Petrograd dispatch received in Rome and given out here by the Wireless Press. On the other wing, according to the dispatch, the Russian advance guards have arrived within a short distance of Trebizond, on the Black sea coast.

LONDON.—The house of commons passed new votes of credit to the amount of $2,100,000,000. This is expected to carry the war to the end of May, bringing the total sum appropriated by means of votes of credit since the outbreak of the war to $10,410,000,000—a sum, according to Premier Asquith, "not only beyond precedent, but actually beyond the imagination of any financier of this or any other country."

SNORING.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—A famous professor was consulted by a patient who complained that the reverberations of his own snoring woke him up.

"That's simple," the professor advised, "sleep in another room."

EDWIN J. KUH, M. D.

HIS CURE.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—I suppose that snoring is an affliction suffered by some people who sleep with their mouths open. I overcame the habit by keeping a wad of gum in my mouth, or a toothpick between by lips overnight. Either method is a gentle and sure way of compelling the mouth to stay shut.

WILLIAM BERG.

AND A SLOGAN.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—I was very much pleased to find the subject of snoring given the prominence it deserves in your influential newspaper. I have suffered for years from this perplexing anti-social trouble, and upon consulting a doctor in whom I had the greatest confidence I was facetiously advised to put a clothespin over my nose. I honestly think it is worth while for the Chicago university, or any other great institution, to devote attention to the relief of the sufferers from the affliction. We cannot always isolate the snorer. He is apt to be sensitive, or even unaware of his untunefulness. But it would seem to be a simple matter, if it is due to slackened muscles, to contrive apparatus or exercises of some kind to restore tone and vitality to the palate. Please keep up the agitation.

For a slogan let me suggest:

"Remember Brigham Young's wives!"

LOUIS RICH.

WITH RESPECT TO MR. C.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—I feel called upon to submit my bit on snorers. The very word evokes in me deep emotion and it cuts me deeply to realize the matter is being treated so lightly by scientific minds.

My efforts toward remedy have been of no avail and my suggestion is illegal—namely, hitting the culprit over the head with a beer bottle—but if some great person discovers a cure, please do not hesitate, even a moment, to give it to the world, as there are more wives like myself who will be everlastingly grateful.

A. C.

BISHOP CANNON.

Aurora, Ill., Feb. 15.—As a believer in fair play I wish to enter a protest against your editorial in today's issue in reference to Bishop Cannon. If his claim that the money was spent on the election of state officers is correct he would not have to make an accounting and it would be up to the prosecution to prove him in the wrong and they have been trying to do so for about three years and have failed.

As a matter of fact, the whole proceedings against him have been in the nature of persecution and nothing else.

It would be a safe bet at ten to one that if he had spent three times the amount, openly and in disregard of the corrupt practices act, in aiding Al Smith instead of Hoover, he would not have been asked even to make a report if he didn't happen to feel like it.

W. J.

USE LESS GAS.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—It must amuse the gas company to see people print items in the paper that gas is costing them more now when it is supposed to be cheaper. They should spend this effort in asking the gas company to adjust their burners correctly for this new gas—then learn not to turn on as much gas as formerly, when the gas was less hot.

A. R. DUNHAM.

HUNGRY CHILDREN.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—The Parent-Teacher association of the Henry H. Nash school, 4837 West Erie street, wish to express their appreciation for the help they have received through your Hungry School Children's fund.

With this help and also other numerous donations from people interested in this worthy cause we have been able to do our part to alleviate some of the suffering of the unfortunate school children in our district. For the last ten weeks we have been providing hot lunches daily for about one hundred and ten children. It is our intention to continue this work for the winter months at least.

We could not have carried on without your assistance, and we are very grateful.

MRS. HARRY LEAHY.

WHEN TREES BLOOM.

Mission, Tex., Feb. 15.—Regarding J. N. W.'s communication of Feb. 2 stating that he has a potted young grapefruit tree in bloom:

Under normal conditions here in the Rio Grande valley about four years are required for a grapefruit tree to bloom after it is set out. But its habits may be altered. The growth of a citrus tree falls into three stages. (1) The root building stage, wherein the tree exerts its energy in building a sturdy root system, (2) the foliating stage, in which a large leaf and branch growth is made, and (3) the fruiting stage. This last period occurs when the foliage has stored up more starches and sugars than are required by the tree as a whole; in other words, the leaves have overbalanced the providing powers of the roots. Then blooms and fruit are formed.

Such a condition is brought about very quickly when the tree is pot grown and the roots therefore restricted. As an additional example of the effect of root depletion I have a one year old tree in my grove in full bloom, three years ahead of schedule, simply because a large part of its roots were inadvertently severed during cultivation.

THADDEUS H. BAKER.

TAXICABS.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—Today's editorial concerning the taxicab situation in Chicago seems too mild. Chicago's situation is that there are too many private cars cruising around and too few taxicabs. The latter, like street cars and buses, are common carriers, and the more the better. Most of these tens of thousands of private cars which clog up the city streets are large five and seven seaters, filling much space and are usually occupied by one person. THE TRIBUNE once said, editorially, and very correctly, that in a metropolis the individual should not have to provide his own transportation to and from work. If we have no subways, if our buses and other means of transportation are permitted, as is now the case, to give inadequate service, let us at least have many, many taxicabs. The more there are the lower the rates will be, and Chicago's rates are far too high. Let the public be warned against a monopoly in this direction. The writer, like many others, is an "in-betweener," that is, he cannot afford to use taxis all the time, but occasionally. Were the rates lower he would spend many more dollars for cabs instead of taking the street car and elevated.

S. VAN RAALTE.

TAX FORECAST.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—I predict that unless some legal means are devised to allow the taxpayer to pay a fair part of 1930 taxes, at the same time guaranteeing not to sell property for the unpaid balance, there will be mighty small returns received, but there will be so many tax suits instituted with corresponding injunctions that it will take years to get it all straightened out.

The Charming Cheat

By Clara Sharpe Hough

SYNOPSIS.

Ricardo Dane visits New York in search of his aunt, Miss Filomena Stanley, his mother's half-sister. Ricardo's mother had recently died and left him heir to the ranch and mountain land in Romeu valley, California, where he had spent most of his life. He intended to find his sole remaining near relative and bring her back to Romeu Valley. He had understood this to be his mother's dying wish. His aunt, an actress, had been out of favor with the family.

Ricardo locates a Filomena Stanley, but instead of an aged aunt he finds a beautiful young aunt. She is living in a Bohemian studio with a Follies girl, named Frances. Ricardo readily believes this lovely creature, who acknowledges the relationship. Ricardo showers her with gifts and moves her into a better apartment. He moves into the same building on another floor. Webster Sutton, a college friend of Ricardo's, visits New York. He and Eunice Greenway, a girl from home, who is studying in New York, are entertained by Ricardo and his aunt. Eunice is a friend of Ricardo's fiancée, Rachel Beatty. She heartily disapproves of Filomena. Web believes his friend is being trimmed and, before he leaves, tells him so. Ricardo learns that Web was right when Filomena is called home due to the illness of her father. After another search Ricardo finds his real aunt. She is acting in a Broadway play. Ricardo's plan is to have Filomena prepare to marry him and leave her waiting at the church, but, before he can carry it out, Rachel arrives in New York with her father, who has been called there on business. Rachel meets the real aunt. She doesn't fit in with the stories Rachel has heard. Ricardo evades telling her the truth, but confides in his aunt. Eunice takes Rachel to call on Filomena. Ricardo meets them in the lobby.

INSTALLMENT XXV.

A COMEDY OF ERRORS.

Ricardo backed into the lobby once more.

"My aunt's not here, of course," he said easily. "You certainly make a snippy comeback, Ray. You look like half a million dollars this morning."

"I've been up since nine," replied Rachel, "and we thought it was such a lovely morning we'd call on your aunt. Daddy and I want her to come to dinner with us tonight. You must be on your way to breakfast."

"You can't throw me out like that," he protested. "I'll get Aunt Fil and bring her to dinner tonight, but she——"

"We'll go up and see her," said Rachel. "I think it would be politer for me to ask her myself, don't you?"

"She isn't here," repeated Ricardo coolly. "She goes to the theater to rehearse, you know. Must be down there now. Shall we go down there?"

"I think we'd better wait for her," said Eunice.

"You'll have to wait five or six hours," he objected at once. "You know she's clear downtown at the theater and she'll hardly come home to lunch when she has to have a matinée so soon after."

"There she is," cried Eunice.

"They don't have a matinée on Friday, do they?" inquired Eunice.

He laughed. "You win. I don't suppose they do, at that. But they do rehearse all afternoon, of course. Why don't we all three jump on a bus and——"

"It's too cold to ride on a bus," said Rachel, "and after I've come all the way up here to see your aunt I think I ought to——"

"Why on earth did you come here to find Aunt Fil, anyway?" he asked. "Don't you remember, Ray, where we went the other day?"

"I'll ask the boy," said Eunice suddenly, and moved past him toward the switchboard. Ricardo's heart fell, but he laughed once more.

"Stubborn, isn't she?" he said to Rachel. "Look, dear, let's clear out of here and get downtown for a bite of lunch—I'll call it breakfast——" He paused, keenly aware of the voice of Edward at the switchboard.

"She must be out, ma'am," said that angelic youth. "She must be out, ma'am, she don't answer, ma'am. No, ma'am, I haven't seen her go out."

"I told you she was out," he said, with an inner triumph.

"I want to see your aunt," said Rachel.

"Can't you make up your mind that she's out, Ray?" said Ricardo. "Dick, if your aunt lives over in that house where we saw her, how can the boy say she's out, here?"

"She's been here at my place a lot, and she leaves her name with the boy, you know, in case of important calls. So she won't miss anything, you know. But, of course, when she's not here——"

"She seemed to be living here, the day I was in her apartment," remarked Eunice.

He laughed again. "That's not her apartment," he explained airily. "Surely, you didn't think that was Aunt Fil's apartment, where we had tea that day, you mean? At least it was called tea, but there wasn't much tea. You know Aunt Fil's brand of gin, Ray. It came near being too much for poor Eunice." He laughed as at a most amusing memory. "I don't think you knew which from the other by the time we went home, did you, Eunice? Though why you should have thought it was Aunt Fil's apartment——"

"I had nothing to drink but tea," snapped Eunice, "and it certainly was her apartment. Or at least it was partly hers. Her clothes were scattered all over it. And so were yours," she added pointedly.

Rachel's eyes had not left his face during this skirmish, which had begun to sound more and more like the lines from some familiar farce. He glanced somewhat anxiously at Rachel, for she had said nothing since her last telling question.

Now as his glance went past her to the elevator he grew more than anxious. Filomena had chosen this moment to step out of the lift.

He hurriedly turned toward the girls.

"Well, how many for snails?" he demanded with gayety.

"I'm not lunching with you," said Eunice with emphasis. "And I would like to——" She stopped. She, too, had seen Filomena.

Filomena, fastening her fur coat as she came, tripped toward them in bright green snakeskin slippers that matched the green hat.

Eunice took a step toward her, achieving a cross between a greeting smile for Filomena and a look of malevolent triumph for Ricardo. It was all wasted. Filomena, without a backward glance or a sidewise glance or any other kind of glance toward them, stepped out of the door.

"There she is," cried Eunice. "Why, that was—that was——"

"My dear girl," smiled Ricardo, "who on earth did you think that was, anyway?"

"You know who it was!" asserted Eunice. "Rachel, that's she! That's his precious aunt; that's his—his——"

"My dear girl," said Ricardo again, and he slipped his arm reassuringly through Rachel's, "that could hardly be my aunt, you know. Why, I never saw her before."

"No," said Eunice, quietly and evenly, recognizing that temporarily at least she was beaten, "no, it couldn't be your aunt. We all know that. But Rachel, it's certainly the girl he called his aunt the night we were out with Web."

Rachel did not reply. She was staring out through the glass of the wide door, watching with all her eyes as Filomena, wrapping her fur coat again, stepped in high heeled green pumps into a taxi and whirled away.

Ricardo continued to smile. He knew now that Rachel knew. She wouldn't have looked after Filomena that way if she hadn't known. She believed now every terrible thing that Eunice had decided to tell her. It was a relief to know, however, that Eunice and not Web had been the one to tell her those things. Web hadn't.

He went on talking about snails for lunch as he urged them outside to find another taxi.

Rachel did not speak until Eunice began again to explain that she could not lunch with them. Then Rachel said: "Eunice, please come. Eunice, come with us. I want you, Eunice. I don't want——" She left her sentence unfinished. She did not want to be alone with Ricardo.

Eunice came with them. When they reached the Brevoort, Rachel had recovered her poise. She entered with spirit into the discussion of snails and other gastronomic dainties, and it was outwardly at least a gay laugh.

Then Eunice really had to leave, for she had a music lesson. Rachel at once said she must shop, and declined Ricardo's company.

"Well, about dinner tonight," he said, detaining the taxi into which he had handed Rachel. "You want Aunt Fil to come to dinner?"

"No, I don't think so," she answered slowly.

"Why, I thought you were keen on it. Why, this morning——"

"All right. Bring her," said Rachel. "Yes, do bring her. Shall I ask Eunice to come, too?"

"Do you know what I think of Eunice?" He climbed into the taxi seat beside her. "Well, for one thing, of course, she's a liar, but that's quite beside the point. If she weren't a liar at all, she's the worst spoilsport I know of, and you know I'm right, don't you? Whose idea was it to try and start something between you and me, anyway?" He drew her toward him for the kiss that should have made everything all right without further words.

She responded slowly and as coldly as though she were offering a caress over the telephone.

"Ray, that's mean," he said reproachfully. "I never see you alone, and you believe every dirty thing that a girl like Eunice can make up to tell you."

Rachel gave him one more chance with very little more warmth and he waved good-by with a final promise to bring Aunt Fil to dinner.

Bright Sayings of the Children

"Mother," said Junior, "you offered a dollar to whoever found your wrist watch. Can I have 50 cents?"

"Why, Junior, have you found it?" queried mother.

"No, but I'm looking for it, an' I could look lots harder if I'd four bits on account," earnestly explained the little seeker. E. C.

Mary's mother raised a large flock of wild ducks this year. One windy day they all took to the air. Mary never had seen them on the wing before and ran to her mother, saying, "O, look, mother. Our ducks all have airplanes!" E. P.

Embroidered Overskirt Appears for Evening Gowns in Paris

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS. — [Special.] — One of the most interesting features of Paris fashions is the transformation dress, of which this scribe has said more than a little. However, there is more to be said, for Augustabernard has created something new long this line, and has done it for one of the famous forty smartest Parisiennes, Mme. Alvaro Munoz.

The model is shown in our sketch. It is a simple evening frock of white chiffon, with a bodice having a cowl neckline in front and a deep V décolleté in black, bordered by wide revers of chiffon. The twisted shoulder straps are another Augustabernard feature. The skirt of this frock is made with a series of cascading white chiffon panels, arranged in pairs around it, and is very long, trailing slightly in back.

At the waist of this frock, as described, Augustabernard ties on an overskirt made of five full length chiffon panels attached to a narrow belt with a bow at the back. These panels are covered with silver and rhinestone embroidery and the belt is also embroidered. Please observe that this overskirt is adjusted to give a low waistline, one that is lower than has been seen since the first natural waistline appeared several years ago. A long chiffon scarf with embroidered ends goes with this frock.

Correct Colors in Costume Set Off Charms of Wearer

Fashion Expert Tells How to Pick Ensemble That Fits the Mood of the Buyer.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

FEMININE charm has never been adequately defined. One great Parisian dress designer has likened charm to electricity—a human electricity. Few women are entirely without charm. You unconsciously play up to your charm when you have a hunch about a particular color, a certain shape of a hat that always flatters your eyes—when you thrill to a lovely shade of color that gives you that sense of security and power.

You can have charm, it is quite true, without undue emphasis on your frocks and gowns, but if you dress incorrectly, if clothes are a negligible quantity, if you do not thrill to the always changing cycles of fashion, if the choosing of a new spring wardrobe is anything but a gay and exciting adventure, then you are dull, for you do not realize that hastily chosen and hurriedly purchased clothes (invariably incorrect) are dangerously detracting, even to great charm.

Consider correct costume accessories. Are you in the mood for a black and white ensemble? Then wear a slim black woolen frock or well fitted suit as a background. Wear hose of sheer gunmetal chiffon and a new black straw hat that tilts, either with or without a brim, over your right eye. Your blouse will be white. Your slipon gloves can be black stitched with white or vice versa. Wear patent leather, classically smart opera pumps. Match them with an envelope bag of black patent leather, pin a white gardenia to your coat lapel, and thus arrayed you are decoratively and smartly clothed for any daytime occasion.

Colors for Costume for Woman with Brown Eyes.

Have you brown eyes, that shade that is like sherry? Then dress in almond green with brown accents, such as perky brown bow of velvet on a green hat. Thick cream colored gloves may be worn over the long sleeves of a rough weave wool two piece frock in almond green color. The buttons or clip fasteners of this frock are a gold metal. Your oxfords and bag will match and be of rich brown leather.

Costume assembling is the most engrossing indoor recreation of all well dressed American women. The tiny details sometimes demand more artistic ability than the major selections of coat or suit or frock. The true artiste rightfully credits the success of her ensembles to the finishing smartness of such minute and seldom seen small color accents as the cases of her lipstick and vanity, the lining of the cuffs of her gloves, and, last but not least, her perfume and her handkerchief.

For instance, the black and white ensemble mentioned is worn by one smart Chicagoar, with the case of her lipstick and vanity of exotic Chinese vermilion. Her 'kerchief is white with huge black dots, and, just for truly feminine contrast she uses an old fashioned lemon verbena scent for perfume.

A Touch of Brilliant Color for the Outfit.

You wouldn't be using very much of your imagination were you to use either green or brown color accents or highlights for the brown and green ensemble we also described, although they would be correct. Use a printed flower spotted handkerchief in brilliant colors and your compact case should be a clear yellow color.

A knowing way with costume accessories marks the ensembles of the fashion wise woman of today. Chicago shops are "happy hunting grounds" for all the new and unusual bags, hats, gloves, jewelry, and handkerchiefs, the little nothings that make the completed costume chic indeed.

Add Five Good Books to List on Washington

Romance of Revolution Is Well Done.

TODAY is the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington, founder of the American republic. In the face of fantastic eulogy and absurd debunking that have been aimed at this first President of the United States recurrently over the period of 200 years he still remains an interesting, a real, and in some ways an unknown personality. This bicentennial celebration brings us five books on Washington, none of which underestimates or slings mud at the character of one of the most significant figures in American history.

IRVING BACHELLER.

"The Master of Chaos," by Irving Bacheller [Bobbs Merrill], is a romance of the revolution. It concerns the adventures and the love affair of Colin Cabot, a young man who through his ability and courage becomes a colonel of the revolutionary forces. The scene shifts from Boston to New York and to Canada, and the action covers the major part of the war with England and ends with the success of the colonies. Most of the important and exciting figures of the revolution appear in these pages and they seem real and integral parts of the romance.

Oftentimes in a story based on historical events, but concerned primarily with fictitious characters, the introduction of real figures seems stiff and causes a retardation of the novel. The picture of Washington, however, is particularly successful. He is closely woven into the story of Colin and Pat, and his guiding spirit bringing the lovers together and unifying the revolution knits the story together and centralizes it. The more human and lovable side of the man is emphasized. There is nothing new in the interpretation of Washington or his kind and motherly wife, but a side of them is brought to light that is not always sufficiently recognized. The book on the whole is an interesting and stirring romance, making real the era and its great men and introducing at least one fictitious character, Capt. Amos Farnsworth, that will not soon be forgotten.

Story of Love for Sally Fairfax.

"The Heart of George Washington," by Bernie Babcock [Lippincott], is a sentimentalized account of Washington's love for Sally Fairfax. It describes their meeting and traces the development of their hopeless love. This story does not pretend to be authentic. From their letters and from the comments of their contemporaries the author has constructed a novel of their romance. There is no longer any doubt in the mind of historians that George Washington loved Sally Fairfax and that after twenty-five years of her absence he still cherished in his heart a devotion to her and to the memory of their past fragile love. It is a significant fact that he wrote her shortly before his death and said that the happiest moments of his life had been spent with her. The author presents the story of the love affair through the eyes and heart of Sally Fairfax. The book is interesting, though oftentimes a little too sentimental.

Norwood Young, author of "George Washington, the Soul of the Revolution" [McBride], is the first Englishman to write a general biography of Washington. The book is long and well documented. The structure of the biography leaves no opening for adverse criticism. The background of the colonies, the history of the Washington family, the analyses of Washington's parental heritage and motives for the revolution, the author's division into sharp and definite sections of the description of the war itself, the later events of Washington's career and his final retirement, all give the book a unity and a comprehensive background that make the era vivid and significant to the modern reader.

The author is neither too factual nor too pyschological in his method, but in using both in a happy combination achieves perhaps the best picture of the age in this group of five books. Mr. Young's treatment of the campaigns, his appreciation of the emergence of the democratic ideal and his realization of the growing unpopularity of Washington towards the end of his life are especially noteworthy. There is an excellent summary at the end of the volume. The chapter entitled "The Dream of a Loyalist" will no doubt arouse a great deal of controversy. In this the author frankly discusses what might have happened had the revolt been quelled.

Louis M. Sears Writes Biography.

Louis M. Sears has written in "George Washington" [Crowell] one of the fullest accounts of the man and the era that we have. His book is authoritative and interesting. The interpretation is eulogistic, though on the whole just. The author, though very learned, does not sense the great movements of history of which the revolution was one. The faults of the biography lie in a not wholly digested presentation of the profuse scholarly research, in a not completely successful technical organization and in an evasion of the important psychological forces at work in Washington's character. As a complete and fair and scholarly piece of writing, however, and as an undeniably valuable reference book, "George Washington" is one of the best that have been written.

"The Naval Genius of George Washington," by Dudley W. Knox [Houghton Mifflin], presents a phase of the hero's activity in the revolution that heretofore has not been treated adequately. There is definitely a contribution to the knowledge of Washington in the chapter on the Yorktown success. The failure at Long Island, however, remains unexplained even in this book. The author has a sense of history, of the movement of men and events, and has offered one new interpretation that will interest and concern even the most profound of Washington scholars.—M. D.

MISS SUZANNE RUSSELL.

[Paul Stone-Raymor Photo.]

Broken Troth Always Causes Pain, Says Doris

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Suppose you were engaged to a young man for six months. You and he had been saving your money together for a future home. Then, you met some one else. Some one you were sure you cared more for than Number One. What would be your next move?

It's "Mary B.'s" problem. Her fiancé is younger than the other man; he is jealous; doesn't want the girl to have any friends, at all; thinks she should not go out places. His "cornering" of the girl, she claims as the basis of her love reaction to the older, more sympathetic man. Older by twenty years, the rival is.

Getting out of an engagement is a far harder job than getting into one, if you happen to have the kind of heart that rebels at causing other people pain. Some one is always hurt when these plighted troths are broken. But self-preservationg being the first law of nature, one may have to do a little hurting to escape a situation that does not promise happines.

If one finds herself involved in a courtship which is not unfolding compatibility of temperament or interest, the sane thing to do is to withdraw before it is put to a marriage test. That is exactly what the courtship period is for—to get two people acquainted with each other. To find out whether they are suited for each other and marriage. To inject a little more reality into the relationship instead of retaining the illusions common to the first days of acquaintance.

It is a simpler matter for a girl to withdraw from an engagement than it is for a man, as a rule. He is not addicted to the heart balm method of revenge. Nevertheless, when he is turned down for another man his pride is wounded deeply. Broken engagements are painful major operations, at best, and the quicker they are over, the better for every one concerned.

However, a girl should try to be sure in her own mind that she is not moved to her new ardor because the older man is more successful. After all, the sweetest romances are those of two people of near age who embark on the adventure at a reasonably early age, starting from scratch and building something fine and big together.

Expert Declares Woman's Shoes Are Good Key to Her Character

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

From the kind of shoes they're encased in and from the manner in which the woman uses her feet, you can learn much about what's going on behind her shoe leather. You can gather whether the woman is a sick footed one or a healthy footed creature. You can tell whether the woman is a victim of silly vanity, an easy going soul or one who orders her shoes, like her clothes, to fit her own individual needs. You can tell whether she would be a companionable partner on a long walk or not. You can tell ever so many things about a woman from the shoe company she keeps.

Anyway, shoes play an important rôle not only in the smartness of the ensemble, but in actual physical charms. You can't go tightwad on that shoe leather without the expression of your face being affected.

Nowadays, shoe sizes—that is, the popular shoe sizes—are so far removed from the Cinderella foot status of legendary fame one wonders why that awfully crowded look so frequently seen within shoe leather. Curious, about that, if you'll notice. It's invariably a plump, short woman who apparently likes her feet to look plump. And they do look all of it in the high heeled, stubby toed distortions bought as shoes.

A size or a size and a half longer would make the foot, ankle, and leg look better. But you can't sell that idea to the woman who believes a short shoe at any cost, a small size at any pain, is the thing to strive for.

There's a rule applying to dress which is likewise applicable to shoes. A dress that is tight enough to make the figure bulge is not smart. There should be breathing space, at least, between the anatomy and covering, be it dress or shoe. In other words, a smartly shod foot, like a smartly dressed figure, has an air of freedom of movement inside.

That breathing space between foot and shoe makes all the difference between good feet and the feet that are callous laden, corn inflicted, and joint distorted.

Julia Peterkin, Noted Author, Takes Lead in Stage Production

During the last two weeks, Julia Peterkin, creator of the Pulitzer prize winning "Scarlet Sister Mary," has been rehearsing the lines of Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" on an average of about ten hours a day.

The play is to be presented by the Columbia Stage society, a local Little Theater group, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Town theater here.

Mrs. Peterkin has the title rôle.

She is finding it "very fascinating," since it brings to her an almost new experience.

Tall Children Need Protection from Remarks

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

If you have an overtal adolescent boy or girl this will interest you: "If a social attitude towards the offences against good taste in our conversation with youth could be fortified by resultant social penalties, the men and women of the next generation might be saved much in the way of crooked spines, graceless carriage, and organic disorders resulting from youthful efforts to conceal extraordinary height."

So writes a mother. Leaving out, for the moment, the discerning first half of the statement, you may think the second half exaggerated. Perhaps you think it the opinion of an oversolicitous mother that the poor posture of the over-tall child is serious. As a matter of fact, it is an opinion generally borne out by doctors. Poor posture during the growing period, if not corrected, has a bad effect on the whole body.

The boys and girls who shoot up in their teens—almost overnight, it sometimes seems—are usually the victims of comments and discussion by their elders. At school their height makes them seem older than they are, so that more is expected of them. Or they are always conspicuous in lines or assemblies. Sometimes the result of this temporary overheight is an attempt to lessen it by drooping the shoulders, letting the bodies down a little, dropping the heads.

The attitude of friends and family can do much to counteract this. One of the most important helps is to cease to draw attention to the excessive tallness. Parents who are thoughtful and determined can some times give the cue to relatives and friends to avoid discussing it. Confidential discussion is another matter. Privately they can occasionally talk these things over with their tall child.

Society to Greet Paderewski at Two Events During His Visit

Charles S. Deweys and Chauncey McCormicks Will Entertain for Noted Pianist.

BY JUDITH CASS.

CHICAGO society will have at least two opportunities to meet the noted Ignace Paderewski when he is in Chicago next month, for the Charles S. Deweys are planning a dinner for him on March 11 and the Chauncey McCormicks will give a supper party for the celebrated pianist and statesman on the evening of the 13th, following his recital at the Civic Opera house. Paderewski, who recently gave a concert at Madison Square Garden in New York for the benefit of the Musicians' Emergency Relief fund and increased that fund by more than $25,000 as a result, will arrive in Chicago on the morning of the 11th and will be entertained at luncheon that day by the Polish consulate.

Dr. Titus Zbyszewski, the Polish consul general, will not be here to welcome his famous fellow countryman, much to the consul's regret, for the consul had made plans to sail for Poland on March 4, long before he knew that Paderewski was coming here in March, and when he did learn of the visit it was too late to change his plans. Dr. Zbyszewski, by the way, is going home for a three months' leave of absence but will return in June and will go to California later in the summer for the finals of the Olympic games, in which he hopes the Polish representatives will make a fine showing. He told me confidentially the other day that the reason the Polish hockey team showed up so badly at Lake Placid recently was because the players wore gloves and played in too careful a manner. They probably discarded their gloves when they came to Chicago, for they were the victors in the game they played against Marquette university at the Chicago Stadium last Tuesday night, the proceeds of which will help defray expenses for the Olympic athletes.

Dr. Zbyszewski has invited Paderewski to stay at his apartment at 999 Lake Shore drive during the time Paderewski is here, but the noted Pole will live in his private car, as he always does on a trip. Mme. Paderewski is not with her husband this time, as the condition of her health made it wiser for her to remain at their home in Switzerland during this tour. Paderewski will go to Madison for a recital on the 14th and then will continue his trip, spending Easter in New York and returning to Chicago to play with the Symphony orchestra on March 31 and April 1.

By Mae Tinée.

Good morning!

There's a trick to producing a really engrossing murder mystery melodrama. It is to present clews that maintain suspense but in no way lays bare the story's outcome. "The Silent Witness" I found QUITE an engrossing murder mystery melodrama.

The picture is an adaptation of the play which also featured Lionel Atwill. The action revolves about the murder of a luscious blond gold-digger who is choked to death.

As a matter of fact you see the man whose fingers clutch her throat. You see him and wonder how there's going to be any more picture since you, the audience, know all.

The catch is, that what you really know is only as a grain of sand on the beach of what you don't know.

Situations unfold swiftly, dramatically, surprisingly. Lionel Atwill, while perhaps overplaying a little, does on the whole a rarely good job of portraying the father of the lad accused of the murder. His rôle calls for considerable versatility and Mr. Atwill reveals that he is the possessor of quite a fund of it.

Greta Nissen is splendid as the light lady who pays for her sins with her unmoral little life. Why on earth don't we see her more often! She's beautiful, lureful, and can act.

Montague Shaw plays a police inspector with brusk effectiveness and Lumsden Hare as a Scotland Yard official is canny and believable. Bramwell Fletcher over-emotes all over the screen as the weakling son of Atwill and is, I thought, quite a trial to the observer. Other rôles are handled with understanding and good taste, with honorable mention to Alan Mowbray. He impersonates the king's counsel, and what a prosecutor he is as he lets fly the interrogational darts that cause Mr. Atwill in the witness chair to writhe, perspire and, finally —never mind!

Direction, photography, sound and lines are commendable, and my opinion is that "The Silent Witness" will suit mystery story lovers very well indeed.

See you tomorrow.

Miss Greece Prefers Her Fame to Fiance and Has Her Way

ATHENS, Feb. 21.—"Well, if I've lost my fiancé, I have at least won fame, and I wouldn't give it up for anybody," declared Miss Greece. It was disclosed that Miss Greece, or Miss Euterpe N. Pampsa, as she was known heretofore, took part in the beauty contest against the wish of her fiancé, thus breaking her engagement.

The particular feature in the selection of Miss Piræus was the fact that she was chosen not by a committee—as usually beauties are chosen—but by a general vote of all persons present at the "election ball." The experiment proved to be a success, and probably henceforth all Grecian beauties will be selected by a kind of plebiscite.

Film Time Table

Good morning!

There's a trick to producing a really engrossing murder mystery melodrama. It is to present clews that maintain suspense but in no way lays bare the story's outcome. "The Silent Witness" I found QUITE an engrossing murder mystery melodrama.

The picture is an adaptation of the play which also featured Lionel Atwill. The action revolves about the murder of a luscious blond gold-digger who is choked to death.

As a matter of fact you see the man whose fingers clutch her throat. You see him and wonder how there's going to be any more picture since you, the audience, know all.

The catch is, that what you really know is only as a grain of sand on the beach of what you don't know.

Situations unfold swiftly, dramatically, surprisingly. Lionel Atwill, while perhaps overplaying a little, does on the whole a rarely good job of portraying the father of the lad accused of the murder. His rôle calls for considerable versatility and Mr. Atwill reveals that he is the possessor of quite a fund of it.

Greta Nissen is splendid as the light lady who pays for her sins with her unmoral little life. Why on earth don't we see her more often! She's beautiful, lureful, and can act.

Montague Shaw plays a police inspector with brusk effectiveness and Lumsden Hare as a Scotland Yard official is canny and believable. Bramwell Fletcher over-emotes all over the screen as the weakling son of Atwill and is, I thought, quite a trial to the observer. Other rôles are handled with understanding and good taste, with honorable mention to Alan Mowbray. He impersonates the king's counsel, and what a prosecutor he is as he lets fly the interrogational darts that cause Mr. Atwill in the witness chair to writhe, perspire and, finally —never mind!

Direction, photography, sound and lines are commendable, and my opinion is that "The Silent Witness" will suit mystery story lovers very well indeed.

See you tomorrow.

Miss Greece Prefers Her Fame to Fiance and Has Her Way

ATHENS, Feb. 21.—"Well, if I've lost my fiancé, I have at least won fame, and I wouldn't give it up for anybody," declared Miss Greece. It was disclosed that Miss Greece, or Miss Euterpe N. Pampsa, as she was known heretofore, took part in the beauty contest against the wish of her fiancé, thus breaking her engagement.

The particular feature in the selection of Miss Piræus was the fact that she was chosen not by a committee—as usually beauties are chosen—but by a general vote of all persons present at the "election ball." The experiment proved to be a success, and probably henceforth all Grecian beauties will be selected by a kind of plebiscite.

The boys who attend the Latin school at 1531 Dearborn parkway aren't having a holiday today, for the school is having its annual open day, and although probably there won't be much work done the school is in session, so that the mothers and fathers and friends who visit it can see the boys at their regular work. Herbert McLaughlin, Paul McBride, and William Campbell are among the alumni who will act as ushers for the guests, and Mrs. Duncan Forbes, Mrs. Bruce Borland, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Walter Cummings, and Mrs. Valentine C. Bartlett are among the mothers who will be hostesses.

At the upper school assembly at 12:20 o'clock Charles B. Pike will speak on the opportunities for Washington study in the new historical library, and Wallace F. Kirk will talk on municipal politics. At 3:30 o'clock the Yoshida trio will give one of its charming performances, and afterwards there will be tea.

The Friends of Opera are starting in earnest this week to raise the amount of money Mr. Insull says is necessary if opera is to continue in Chicago. Mrs. Charles King Corsant is to serve as chairman of the guarantee fund committee, and the first meeting will be held on Wednesday at 4 o'clock at Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's residence. On Wednesday of next week the women will meet at Mrs. Waller Borden's house, and on the following Wednesday Mrs. Arthur Meeker will be hostess to the committee. There is also to be a radio campaign which will open with a talk by Mrs. Arthur Meeker at 9:45 o'clock tonight over the National Broadcasting chain.

The Woman's Athletic club has announcements out for its two swimming meets, the first to be held next Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, and the second on the morning of April 16. A special luncheon will be served on both days.

Classes will include a turtle and pollywog race for children under 6 years, fancy diving for girls under 12, a 20 yard crawl for girls of 12 years and over, and a mothers and daughters' 20 yard relay. The official judges will be members of the Northwestern School of Physical Education, and Mrs. Raymond C. Dudley, Mrs. William N. Pelouze, Mrs. Stanley Zaring, and Mrs. William F. Petersen will act as honorary judges.

Another card from the W. A. C. announces that Miss Crescenz McCormack of the Boston School of Physical Education is at the club as instructor of tap dancing and Danish limbering and stretching exercises.

Vassar alumnæ of the city and suburbs are planning to listen in on the radio today from 2:45 until 3 o'clock to hear the Vassar Glee club broadcast in the fourth of a series of seven broadcasts by the choirs of famous colleges for women. Mrs. Percival G. Hart has invited a number of friends to her residence, 4820 Kenwood avenue, to hear the broadcast, and there will be numerous other gatherings of Vassar alumnæ and friends to hear the short concert. Mrs. Hart is president of the Chicago Vassar club, which will meet tomorrow afternoon at the Art institute to hear a lecture by Charles Fabens Kelley and to see the oriental collection under his guidance. After the lecture tea will be served.

Movie Studios Busy with New Horror Films

Report Good Business on First Series.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 21.—The summer will be goose flesh season for film goers, for the last batch of horror films "took" so well that the studios are preparing to pile them out in greater quantity.

Universal, which started the procession with "Dracula," "Frankenstein" and "Murders in the Rue Morgue," is following up with "The Dark House," in which Colin Cleve and Boris Karloff are to be cast. Universal also has Nina Wilcox Putnam writing "Cagliostro," and in reserve are Stevenson's "Suicide Club," Wells' "The Invisible Man" and James Gould Cozzens' story, "S. S. Sanpedro," which, like E. A. Dupont's "Atlantic," is the story of a vessel's last voyage.

With his "freaks" drawing much attention for M. G. M., Tod Browning is setting about writing another weird story featuring Eck, the legless man of that cast. Warner-First National will shortly contribute "Mr. X" as its contribution to the blood curdlers and Paramount with "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" now out has a couple more such scripts under way.

Percy Westmore, topnotcher among the film makeup men, was listing his idea of the girls who will be replacing Greta Garbo, Ruth Chatterton, Marlene Dietrich, Joan Crawford and Joan Bennett as the big stars of a coming year.

Here's Westmore's list, and his reasons.

"Ann Dvorak. Makes you think of a very beautiful peasant woman. Vitality, strength in great quantities. All the wholesomeness of Europe's sturdy women. About six months ago she looked like a little peasant girl, using no cosmetics, but was even then striking. Now she has learned to carry her head, she realizes the best expressions of the eyes. There has been time to study the photographic results in her tests and pictures and she has much improved what she started with.

"Elissa Landi. She's never yet been photographed to the best advantage. Every one of her features appears as if it had been modeled by a sculptor. An exceptionally lovely face.

"Rochelle Hudson has a kind of child and mother beauty. Big eyes, dark hair, baby face contribute to an effect of general loveliness. The camera catches her very sweet personalty.

"The screen is better for brunettes than blondes, because few blondes in the movies reflect sincerity. Subconsciously you hold the idea of bleached hair, and the feeling the girl is false, even in the one item, makes her less truly interesting. I cannot hold with the Joan Harlow type of beauty because it is so artificial.

"But with Madge Evans there is a contradiction of this blonde theory. She's real. She's what I'd call a 'sister type of girl,' representing sisterliness, companionship, quality.

"Arline Judge. Petite, dark, flaming eyed, represents a certain gamin type of beauty.

Westmore prefaced his comment with the assurance that there were "probably several other girls who will represent fine bets in the future," but says he happens to be better acquainted with the girls he singled out for mention, and has great faith in them as future screen hits.

Juan F. Cardenas, newly appointed Spanish ambassador to the United States, spent yesterday in Hollywood, en route from his former post at Tokio to Washington, and while here he got away with something nobody else is allowed to do. He took his own camera with him into the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio and took some amateur movies of the professional movie people doing their stuff here.

Outsiders' cameras always are barred from the film lots. Ambassador Cardenas is an enthusiastic photographer, and spent some of his time talking shop with the movie cameramen.

Washington Kin Tell of Visits to Mt. Vernon

Two Hinsdale Residents Are Nephews.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

"MISS JENNY'S chill'un: Quick, the great key." And the elderly servant turned to open the private chambers of Mount Vernon for little Richard and Thomas Willis. It wasn't so many years before that he had helped rear their mother in the historic mansion.

Yesterday one of these "little boys," now Richard Washington Willis, took a few minutes to recall this childhood experience and stories his mother had related of the days she spent on the great Virginia estate. For while the nation lays aside its chores today to do honor to George Washington, father of his country, the two Willis brothers, now both residents of Hinsdale, will celebrate the bicentenary of George Washington, their uncle, four generations removed.

"The descent begins with John Augustine Washington," Mr. Willis started to explain. "You see, he was a full brother of George Washington, one of six children by Augustine Washington's second marriage to Mary Ball in 1730. Then he had a son, Corbin Washington, who, by his marriage to Hannah Lee, had a son, John Augustine Washington.

Great-Grandfather Inherits Estate.

"It was this man, my great-grandfather, who inherited Mount Vernon in 1829 from his Uncle Bushrod Washington." Mr. Willis continued. "George Washington at his death in 1799 bequeathed the estate to Mrs. Washington. His will further provided that at her death, which came just three years later, the property should go to his favorite nephew, Bushrod Washington, then an associate justice of the Supreme court. For 27 years he maintained an unostentatious but graceful hospitality at Mount Vernon, bequeathing it then to our branch of the family."

John Augustine Washington, Mr. Willis' great-grandfather, lived in Mount Vernon for only two years before his death. The estate then passed to his widow and later to their eldest son, John Augustine Washington, grandfather of the Willis brothers and the last private owner of Mount Vernon.

"Our mother was his daughter, Jane Charlotte," Mr. Willis went on. "She was born at Mount Vernon and lived there until grandfather was persuaded by Miss Ann Pamela Cunningham to convey the property to the Mount Vernon Ladies' association in 1860. I well remember the stories my mother told of the heavy financial drain the upkeep of the estate was. Gen. Washington himself had ample means to maintain it, despite its extensive and unfertile acres, but his large fortune was so divided among his relatives that none of them was made rich by it.

"Soon after my grandfather left Mount Vernon," Mr. Willis continued, "he was killed while serving as a colonel on Gen. Lee's staff in the civil war. Then grandmother took up her residence on some property that still remained in the Washington family at Bletely, W. Va., and here my father, Nathaniel Hite Willis, a southerner, courted my mother."

Special Privileges at Mount Vernon.

Today the graves of Mr. Willis' grandmother and grandfather rest near those of Gen. and Mrs. Washington in the little Mount Vernon burial yard. And now, just as when they were children, Richard and Thomas Willis are allowed special privileges when they visit Mount Vernon. They may enter any of the private rooms with the exception of that containing the rug presented to Gen. Washington as a gift by King Louis XVI. of France. This week Thomas Willis will take advantage of these privileges after he plays a part in the Washington bicentennial celebration in the nation's capital city.

Thomas and Richard Willis with another brother and three sisters grew up near Charles Town, W. Va., where there is still considerable property owned by the Washington family. Eighteen years ago they established their residence in Hinsdale.

In this same connection it is interesting to know that the little western suburb also boasts a descendant of Justice William Cushing, who delivered the oath of office to Washington at the beginning of his second term. This is Otis Cushing, who told yesterday of how President Washington announced at his inaugural that "William Cushing will be the next chief justice of the Supreme court of the United States." When Justice Cushing administered the oath he was judge of the Supreme Judicial court. Subsequently the prediction nearly came true, as he was offered the chief justiceship of the United States Supreme court. It was an honor Justice Cushing was forced to decline, however, on account of ill health.

British Economy Hits Prerogatives of Royal Family

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The ax of economy is about to hack away a few more remaining royal prerogatives. King George is to lose the constitutional right to make several high sounding appointments which are sinecures so far as the jobs are concerned because the country can no longer afford to meet these pay checks.

The office of lieutenant of the tower—the Tower London—where the crown jewels are kept, and the posts of constable of Windsor and the keeper of Virginia Water are to be abolished.

The lieutenancy of the tower carries a pay of a field marshal, with a position in the throne room. Virginia Water is confided to the safekeeping of an officer who though retired lives rent free with the same salary as a rear admiral. Virginia Water is one of the royal properties.

Official Contract

By Charles True Adams

(International bridge authority; author of "Official Contract at Sight")

Before the days of heavy artillery a small force descending a narrow gorge could hold it against the armies of a dozen kings. All they had to do was to stand at each side, and the enemy, regardless of size, had to come through a few at a time which allowed the defenders to smack them down with stones, rocks, arrows, or any other handy implement.

In contract bridge and at no-trump play the same strategy as that of the narrow path is often used. By this I mean if you can keep the lead bottled up in the right place you can force the strong troops (meaning the high cards) to come in, one at a time from the proper direction and gather them in at your pleasure, always keeping control of the situation. Witness yesterday's play-a-problem which was:

NORTH
♥—9,7,4,3
♦—Q,9,4
♣—Q,10,2

WEST
♠—9,8,6,4
♥—A,J,10,8,2
♦—3,2
♣—K,9

EAST [Dealer]
♥—6
♦—A,10,8,5

SOUTH
♥—K,Q,5
♦—K,J,7,6
♣—5,4,3

East dealt and bid a club. South doubled. West took out with a heart. North passed and East, taking the bull by the horns, jumped the bid to three no-trumps. All passed.

South opened the ♦ 6, West played the 2, North the Q, and East took the trick with the A. It will be noted now that East can place practically every high card in South's hand. Since only the ♠ K, J remain against him over his own ten spot, East is perfectly safe in the diamond suit, assuming that North is not allowed to lead diamonds through him. For this reason East now leads the ♣ 6 to dummy's K and returns the ♣ 9 from dummy. Taking the finesse this way up against South, he need not be afraid of a diamond lead from North. On dummy's 9 North played the 10, East the J, and South the 4. East now led the ♣ A, which cleared the suit, and followed by leading out the ♣ 8 and the ♣ 7. On these two cards South discarded the ♦ 7 and the ♠ 5. West discarded the ♥ 2 and the ♠ 4. East now can easily read South's hand. He can see that South holds no more clubs, holds simply the ♦ K, J, and holds the ♥ K, Q, and a small one, and the ♠ K, Q. He, therefore, leads, to trick seven, the ♠ A, which dropped South's ♠ Q. Next to trick eight East led the ♠ 2, putting South in the lead with the ♠ K. South is now bottled up in an ancient narrow path. To tricks nine and ten South leads the ♦ K, J, and at trick eleven must lead the ♥ K, which West ducked. To trick twelve then South leads the ♥ Q, which West takes with the A and then takes the thirteenth trick with the ♥ J—giving East and West three odd and the game.

Perhaps there is a way that North and South might have defeated the contract. See if you can see any reasonable variation from the play given above that would have allowed South and North to successfully defend this hand. The variation, of course, would come in South's discards on East's long clubs.

NORTH
♠—Q,J,3,2
♥—Q,J,9,8
♦—6,5,4

WEST
♠—9,8,5
♥—4,3
♦—K,J,9
♣—K,Q,9,8,7

EAST
♠—10,7,6
♥—6,5
♦—10,8,7,2

SOUTH [Dealer]
♠—A,K,4
♦—A,Q,3
♣—10,4

Bid and play this hand and then compare the result with the one printed tomorrow.

Germany Tolls Bells and Strikes Flags for War Dead

BERLIN, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Church bells tolled and flags were half staffed today in recognition of "Reminiscence Sunday," a national day of mourning for Germany's two million war dead. President von Hindenburg attended a solemn memorial service with Chancellor Bruening and other officials in the black draped plenary hall of the reichstag. Speakers at Nationalist gatherings emphasized the nation's determination to resolve its former glory.

Chamber Music Dominates in Day of Concerts

Gordon String Quartet Wins Approval.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Most of yesterday's concert attractions classified under the title of chamber music organizations. Of these the most notable, to say the most expert, was the Gordon String quartet, headed by the adept though former concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, appearing at the Cliff Dwellers' last night.

These four artists gave a highly engaging performance of the quartet in G, opus 77, No. 1, by Haydn, and that in C minor, opus 51, No. 1, by Brahms. One feels like apologizing for so technical a description, but none other, by grace of composers and publishers, is possible. Anyway, it was great music and a brilliant performance, divided by a work from the pen of Werner Janssen called "American Kaleidoscope."

It was a first performance in Chicago, and played from manuscript. The composer would seem to have justified the title of his work by trying to convert quartet effects into as many full orchestral effects as possible, and then surveying the subject of jazz through the spectacles that surmount a lofty brow. No one, not even the most exigent, should feel inclined to quarrel with either technic or theory. Yet there is a persistent memory that the Haydn quartet, not to say the Brahms, was better music. Here there was something lovely to carry away in the mind and think about afterwards.

In the afternoon the Chicago String quartet gave the fourth of its series at the Chicago Woman's club, celebrating the approach of the Washington bicentennial by playing a program of Chicago composers. A quartet in E minor, opus 75, by the greatly learned Adolf Brune began the list, to be followed by the first movement of quartet in E flat by Adolf G. Hoffmann, and that by a full quartet in A minor by Robert L. Sanders. The performance was well studied and carefully wrought.

Another good performance was heard at the Cordon club, where the Beethoven trio began the first of three hearings. This was a Russian program, two movements of Rachmaninoff's "Trio Elegiaque," shorter pieces by Glinka and Glazounoff, and the trio in C minor by Gretchaninoff. Miss M. Jennette Loudon, pianist, Sebastian Victor Tufigno, violinist, and Willem C. Hofmeester, cellist, are excellent artists.

The single concert outside the chamber music list was given by the Chicago Bach Singers at Kimball hall. A dozen women singers directed by Else Harthan Arendt, with Edwin Stanley Seder, organist, gave a Bach program for the benefit of the Chicago Bach chorus.

They are a highly trained organization with good voices, fine sense of Bach's music, and enunciation clear beyond the ordinary. Most of the program was of Bach's chorales and choruses from his cantatas. One single number, "They Peep in Each Nest," raised the question why more of Bach's secular music is not presented by the Bach organizations. For while it is much in the manner of his sacred music, it is lighter in treatment and gayer in mood. It had a performance of which any chorus might be proud.

Crowds Cheer Prince on Way to Marry Boyhood Sweetheart

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Prince Lenhart, a grandson of King Gustaf, started for London tonight with his boyhood sweetheart, Karin Nisswandt, to be married in spite of royal disapproval.

The romance has touched the hearts of the Swedish people and a great crowd assembled at the station to wish the pair good luck, almost smothering the bride-to-be in flowers.

After the marriage in a registry office the couple plan a honeymoon tour of Europe under the names of Mr. and Mrs. Bernadotte. They will live in a castle on an island in Lake Constance, Switzerland.

Events on the Stage

On March 1 Earl Carroll, the producer of revues, will be compelled by his creditors to relinquish possession of the handsome and spacious New York theater which he dedicated last August, and which now shelters the latest edition of his "Vanities." He hopes to move the show to another theater next week. His ornate playhouse, seating 3,000 and decorated in a lavish modernistic style, will pass under the control of the 755 Seventh Avenue corporation, headed by Grafton Minot.

Mr. Carroll attributes his difficulties to "the unreasonable cost of temporary financing." It is said that his backer in this project, W. R. Edrington, a Texas oil magnate, is ill and apparently unwilling to come to the rescue.

The final performances of "Marching By" at the Great Northern last Saturday were inspected by J. J. Shubert for the purpose of determining the operetta's values for a New York engagement. His decision was favorable, and the troupe is now headed toward Broadway, where it will have a première eight or ten days hence. Desirée Tabor, prima donna of the company for the past week or two, will be retained for the New York run.

George M. Cohan is preparing to launch a new play of his authorship called "Confidential Service," and to act its central rôle. The first performance will be given in Newark, N. J., March 28.

Tonight's premieres in Chicago are: "The Band Wagon," a revue with Fred and Adele Astaire, Frank Morgan and Helen Broderick as chief entertainers, at the Illinois theater, and "Experience Unnecessary," a comedy with Walter Woolf and Veree Teasdale in the leading rôles, at the Harris theater under the auspices of the Dramatic league. Next Wednesday night a drama called "Tradition" will be offered at the Eighth Street theater. Only five performances will be given.

Holiday Gets Attention of Food Expert

Make Suggestions on Entertaining.

BY MARY MEADE.

By dint of much effort we have succeeded in exercising sufficient restraint and did not give you any Washington birthday entertaining last week. So today, if you do want to entertain simply and yet ever so nicely, we have a few suggestions for you.

First of all, when we think of Washington we remember his lovely wife, and the delicious Martha Washington pie which was named for her. You may make this with any sponge cake base, but in the event that you haven't one at hand, use the following recipe.

Martha Washington Pie.

1 cup of sugar.
3 eggs.
Salt.

Beat the eggs until light and add to them a few grains of salt. Add the sugar gradually, then the flavoring and milk, beating all the time. Sift the baking powder with the flour and fold gently into the egg mixture. Bake in two layers in a moderately slow oven [325 degrees Fahrenheit] in buttered and floured layer cake pans. These will be baked in about twenty to twenty-five minutes.

Custard Filling for Pie.

1 cup of sugar.

Mix the dry ingredients and add the egg yolks, slightly beaten. Pour over this mixture, very gradually, the scalded milk. Cook for fifteen minutes in the upper part of a double boiler, stirring constantly until thickened, and then occasionally. Cool and add the flavoring. Spread between the two cake layers.

In the recipe just given the whites of the eggs left over from the custard filling may be used in a boiled frosting. Or, if you want to save them for other cooking, the cake may be finished with a generous dusting of confectioner's sugar over the top. Either makes it delicious. The thing to remember about this kind of cake is that it is best served as soon after making as possible.

Another Washington birthday suggestion is named after our first President himself. This is the George Washington cherry log, and it's made exactly like an every day jelly roll. Only, instead of using a jelly filling, substitute a thin chocolate icing. After you have rolled it up and let it cool, frost the outside with chocolate, too. Take a fork and mark the frosting so that it resembles the bark of a tree. Place little cherries which have stems and leaves over the chocolate bark for decoration. This cake is best made with a boiled icing for the inside and a butter frosting for the outside. The latter scores more easily than the former, and proves more adaptable for decorating purposes.

Now with these two cakes for your informal party, you may offer either to your guests with coffee, or alone. The less effort and service involved in entertaining these days is by far the most fashionable!

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The outstanding problem of the last few weeks in the American division of the National Hockey league, that of second place, was adjusted to the satisfaction of 10,000 customers at the Stadium last night, when the Blackhawks defeated the Boston Bruins, 2 to 1.

Prior to the game the Hawks, the Bruins and the Detroit Falcons were tied for second place, but at the end of the evening the Hawks found themselves holding the position all alone, because the Falcons could do no better than tie the Canadiens.

Shore Attacks Official.

Aside from the Hawks' victory, of which they were sorely in need, the most interesting feature of the performance was the embarrassment of old Eddie Shore, who came out of the contest with a match penalty, presented to him by Referee Smeaton after he had attempted to salute the official with several left hooks. This occurred in the closing minutes of the game, and not only eliminated the belligerent Edward, but will force him to stand in the corner until the league officials decide to let him play again.

Vic Ripley, Lolo Couture and Johnny Gottselig collaborated on the Hawks' goals in the second period, with Vic and Lolo doing the honors and Johnny assisting them. The Bruins' only goal was delivered by Oliver in the last period.

Action Starts Immediately.

After the cowbell chorus under the eaves had put on a special number for the benefit of Referees Smeaton and Romeril, the teams came out and proceeded to put on some of the most spirited hockey of the season.

The action was such that every man on the rink had his bloomers thoroughly dusted with ice as soon as he reported for duty, but the one that pleased the customers most in this respect was old Mr. Shore, who was deposited on the ice half a dozen times by Graham and Abel.

At the end of ten minutes the Bruins put on an offensive that taxed Chuck Gardiner's ability no end. Cooney had two wide open shots, and, although he tried to lure Gardiner out of the cage, Chuck refused to hold still and followed up these two stops with a half dozen others that sent the house into a frenzy.

Hawks Score Twice.

The Bruins' chief problem at the beginning of the second period was chiefly a matter of getting the puck past center ice, for the Hawks seemed determined not to allow the visitors anywhere near Gardiner.

The customers were finally given their idea of a treat in a Bruin game, that of seeing Shore sentenced to the penalty box, and this was further enhanced by the Blackhawks' first goal while Eddie was serving time for tripping Boucher. It took Ripley, with a pass from Gottselig, to drive the puck past Thompson. The time was 5:10.

This business of scoring with Shore off was reënacted a little later. Eddie sent Gottselig sprawling and was deported for same. The abbreviated Bruins could not stand off the savage young Hawks, and Couture, with the assistance of Ripley and Gottselig, made the score 2 to 0 in 15:35.

Eddie Gets Mad.

The trade in the upper regions was given more cause to boo and cheer, when Shore became peeved and started bumping every Hawk in sight. The Chicagoans then took turns at stretching Eddie on the ice. Young Louie Holmes scored about four knockdowns by himself.

A 2 to 0 lead at the start of the third period incensed the Bruins to a new fury. George Owen, the old Harvard football player, making his first appearance on Stadium ice in three years and Weiland began pestering Gardiner, but Chuck was having a great evening and stood off all of the Bruin assaults.

The Boston offensive finally was rewarded with a goal executed by Oliver with no assistance in 10:10. Gardiner was three feet out of his cage by the time the puck had found its way in.

BOXERS OF FOUR LIGHT CLASSES MEET TONIGHT

3 Days of Fighting at White City.

First Bout at 7

Event—South Side Golden Gloves tournament.

Time—Tonight, tomorrow, and Wednesday.

Boxers—Contestants in 112, 118, 126, and 135 pound classes report between 4 and 6 o'clock this afternoon at White City for physical examinations and to be weighed; all others, 147, 160, 175, and heavyweight classes, report tomorrow afternoon.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The last of Chicago's three preliminary Golden Gloves tournaments opens tonight at White City. For three nights the boys of the south side and from nearby county towns will battle for 16 qualifying positions in the Tournament of Champions. Four hundred and sixty-seven, a record for Golden Gloves sectionals, have entered the south side tournament.

Bouts in four weight divisions—112, 118, 126, and 135 pounds—will be held tonight. Contestants in these classes must report at White City between 4 and 6 o'clock for physical examinations and to be weighed. All other boxers will report tomorrow afternoon at the same time. On Wednesday the winners of the two previous nights in all eight divisions will meet in the semi-finals and finals and from them will come the 16 qualifiers.

No Increase in Prices.

Admission each night is 75 cents, the same price that has prevailed at the west and north side tournaments. No seats are reserved. The doors will open at 6 o'clock and the first bout will start an hour later.

The majority of the south side contestants are Chicago boys. The large number of competitors is due not only to the interest in boxing on the south side, but also because those who were not able to compete in the other sections because of injuries were given permission to shift to the south side.

Outside of Chicago there is no geographical limitation on sectional entries. Last year, for instance, eight boys entered from Cleveland, O.

Iowa Boy Confident.

This year Don Brand of Fort Dodge, Ia., will try his fortune in the south side ring. Brand won the Iowa state lightweight title at a recent tournament in Davenport. He and several other winners in that tournament inquired concerning Golden Gloves. All were told that they were eligible to compete if in good standing with the A. A. U. and paid their own traveling expenses. Brand is so certain he is the best lightweight in the central states that he is making the trip to White City to prove it.

The competition on the south side probably will be more keen than in the preceding trials, primarily because more experienced boys have entered. Although the south side meet lasts three days, none of the boys will be required to box more than twice in one night, except in one or two weight divisions. All rounds will be of two minutes duration, and since the A. A. U. now prohibits a fourth round in case of a tie, no match can last longer than six minutes.

Many Knockouts Expected.

The south side will see tonight all those deeds of valor which the west and north sections of the city already have witnessed. There'll be knockouts, toe to toe struggles and fancy boxing. And there's plenty of room in the big arena at White City. Last year's attendance on the final night set a sectional record which it is hoped the 1932 tourney will equal.

Meanwhile, boxers of the other Chicago sections and the champions from out of town who have qualified for the Tournament of Champions are drilling daily for the mammoth tournament which opens one week from tonight at the Chicago Stadium. Two rings will be used. Tickets range from 50 cents to $1.50 and may be purchased at the public service offices of THE TRIBUNE or at Tribune Tower.

Who'll Stop Purdue? Indiana Quintet Gets Chance Tonight

Big Ten Standings

	*W.	L.	T. P.	O. P.

Minnesota	6	3	258	222

Ohio State	4	5	252	287
Indiana	4	5	264	277
Iowa	2	7	243	275
Chicago	1	6	161	225
Wisconsin	1	6	156	215

*W., games won; L., games lost; T. P., total points; O. P., opponents' points.

The Big Ten basketball race probably will be settled tonight. Purdue, now leading with six victories and one defeat, faces Indiana at Bloomington. Northwestern, twice defeated and in second place, visits the Wolverines at Ann Arbor.

If Purdue wins and Northwestern loses the Boilermakers can prepare for whatever celebration the citizens of Lafayette, Ind., wish to offer the 1932 conference champions. Such an outcome tonight would place Purdue two games ahead of the field with four games remaining on its schedule. These four games are: At Wisconsin; Illinois at home; at Northwestern, and Chicago at home.

Purdue Seems Sure of Tie.

Purdue should whip Wisconsin and Chicago, so even if Illinois and Northwestern are able to beat the Boilermakers, Purdue would still have a tie for the title.

However, predictions in basketball have a way of going astray. If any proof is needed that basketball form is inconsistent, see what the Maroons did Saturday night. Defeated six consecutive times, Chicago came back and walloped Ohio State, 29 to 26. There was much rejoicing on the Midway, since it had been suspected Chicago might go through its Big Ten schedule without a victory. Perhaps the triumph over Ohio comes in the same category as Chicago's triumph over Illinois on the gridiron last fall.

How about this for form reversal? Wisconsin, which held Northwestern to a one point victory to start the season, which was beaten by Michigan by only six points, was overwhelmed Saturday night by Minnesota, 43 to 17. This is the record for the season in point difference. The worst previous licking received by any team was Indiana's 49 to 30 defeat by Purdue. Incidentally, Purdue's 49 points in that game still stands as the high scoring mark, although the Boilermakers came within one point of duplicating it Saturday night when they trimmed Northwestern, 48 to 33.

Can't Stop Wooden, Kellar.

The tie between Northwestern and Purdue was broken Saturday night and Purdue went into the lead. Previously Illinois had upset Purdue and only a week ago Iowa had slipped one over the Wildcats. When Johnny Wooden and Harry Kellar, Purdue's co-captains, are in form, it is difficult to understand how any team can beat the Boilermakers. Saturday night the captains scored 28 points between them, Wooden getting his seventh field goal just before the final gun.

They played against Northwestern like they played against Indiana, covering the floor brilliantly, fairly smothering opponents with their exceptional speed, and shooting phenomenally. However, their ability is enhanced in that they have support from others almost as good. Ray Eddy, Dutch Fehring, and Ralph Parmenter provide a perfect setting for Wooden and Kellar. Every Purdue regular Saturday night scored at least six points.

Illinois in Top Form.

Northwestern's handicap against Purdue was a lack of substitutes. With the exception of Brewer, Coach Dutch Lonborg has had to depend on five men throughout the campaign. Saturday night Bob McCarnes left the game on four personals near the end of the first half. Elmer Johnson followed at the start of the second period. If Northwestern can keep its lineup intact in the return game with Purdue, there is a chance for a reversal of the verdict.

Illnois right now seems to be playing consistently good basketball, emulating the 1931 season when, after losing five games, the Illini won seven, including a victory over Northwestern, the champion. Saturday night Illinois whipped Michigan, 29 to 23, to get even for a defeat at Ann Arbor, 26 to 16.

HORNSBY GIVES BARTON SPECIAL BATTING LESSON

Vin Must Forget About Home Runs.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Avalon, Catalina Island, Feb. 21.—As the first step in relieving some of the doubt about the Cub outfield combination, Manager Hornsby today devoted some attention to Vin Barton, the husky young man who was hastily recalled from the Los Angeles team last summer.

Barton's trouble, based on his performance in the big league, is his hitting. It is mainly a matter of style at the plate and to make the big Canadian conform to the Hornsby hitting ideas, which must be good if records mean anything, is the Cub pilot's problem. If it can't be solved some other fellows will have to be found for the job and just at present there doesn't seem to be any real candidate.

Fog Hinders Activities.

While Barton was engaged in his lesson the other members of the advance squad busied themselves with the labors customary to early training. The program was hampered slightly by another phase of California weather. A chilly wind blowing in off the ocean laid a fog screen over the field and visibility was limited.

Barton, if he is to play either right or left field regularly, must correct an inclination toward free swinging. It's a habit he cultivated after the Cubs dropped him off for seasoning at Los Angeles a year ago. He happened to get in a home run tie with another fellow and so much publicity was given the matter that Vin could think of nothing less than homers.

Must Change Style.

He did nothing except aim at the right field bleachers in the Angels' park and finally reached the stage where he couldn't do anything else. Prior to that he had been hitting to all fields. This accounts for his hitting thirteen home runs, all to right field, after he joined the Cubs, and yet finishing the season with an average of only .238.

What Hornsby hopes to do is to restrict the young man to a follow through poke in which the wrist movement is prominent. It is from the wrist that Hornsby derives his power at the plate. Hornsby explained to Barton today that if he can develop this method he will be surprised at the distance he can get with a minimum of effort. The beauty about the first lesson was that Barton caught on instantly. So Hornsby still has hopes his outfield will not be as weak as he feared at first.

Gudat Looks Promising.

Another outfielding prospect is beginning to develop in Marvin Gudat, a 26 year old player drafted from the Columbus American association team. He was a pitcher originally, but couldn't put much stuff on the ball. Some manager, who recognized his hitting ability, put him to work chasing flies. He not only fielded like a veteran at Columbus last season but hit for a .343 average. What Hornsby likes about him is his style at the plate. He hits to all fields, but there is no use becoming enthusiastic over him until after the pitchers are able to bear down in batting practice.

BURLEIGH GRIMES IS READY TO QUIT FARM FOR CAMP

New Haven, Mo., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Burleigh Grimes, baseball pitcher and dirt farmer, will turn his farm here over to his brother Tuesday and leave for Omaha, where he will join the Chicago Cubs on their way west for spring training.

After a winter's hard work outdoors, Grimes said today he was in first class condition for the baseball season.

ALL TOGETHER NOW: 'WE WANT GOLDEN GLOVES!'

AMERICANS JAR RANGERS, 3-2; END LOSING STREAK

New York, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The New York Americans snapped out of a six game losing streak tonight to defeat their local National Hockey league rivals, the Rangers, 3 to 2. The Rangers had won the three previous intra-city clashes.

A goal behind after 31 seconds of play, the Americans ran the Rangers ragged through two periods, then held off their rivals' closing drive with a fine defensive display. Roy Worters, American goalie, played the game of his life and Vernon Ayres, Red Dutton and Allan Shields more than made up for the absence of Bill Brydge, veteran defense man who was kept out by an injured hand.

A little more than a minute after Bun Cook scored the quick Ranger goal, Roy Burmeister tied the count for the Americans. Jackie Keating put the Star Spangled team ahead before the first period ended and Joe Lamb broke away for the winning goal in the third.

CANADIENS, FALCONS TIE.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Montreal's Canadiens and the Detroit Falcons played a 1 to 1 tie tonight before 12,500, the largest crowd to see a National Hockey league game in Detroit this season.

A goal early in the first period by Frank Carson, Falcon wingman, who took the puck from in front of his own net and battled the length of the ice to score lone handed, kept intact Detroit's record of only one home loss this season. Howie Morenz scored for the Frenchmen in the second period.

Ruth, Burke Lose in Exhibition Golf Match

Belleair, Fla., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Babe Ruth, the home run king, and Billy Burke, national open golf champion, were beaten today, 3 and 2, by Joseph B. Schlotman of Detroit and Walter Hagen, former national and British open titleholder.

Glen's a Fighter from Out Where the Tall Corn Grows

BY FRENCH LANE.

From out in the tall corn country of Iowa there will come into THE TRIBUNE'S Golden Gloves Tournament of Champions on Feb. 29 a farmer boy heavyweight who threatens to cause all sorts of trouble for the big fellows from 23 other tournament centers.

His name is Glen Dexter and he is a genuine tiller of the soil. He gets his mail when the carrier on rural route No. 1 out of Davenport drops in on his daily rounds.

Glen isn't a finished boxer and he hasn't had much experience, for it was in the third fight of his career that he won the Davenport Times heavyweight championship, putting away a Golden Gloves veteran, Buzz Green, the Colona, Ill., butcher boy. Buzz twice fought and gave good accounts of himself in the Tournament of Champions.

But out Iowa way they say he is a natural boxer and that no mule can kick as hard as Glen can hit with his trusty right. He knocked out his first two opponents in the Davenport meet with that terrific right. He had hit Buzz Green so often with it for three rounds that Buzz was happy when the bell ended their scrap. Glen isn't a particularly heavy fellow, scaling about 182 pounds, but he towers some 6 feet 3 inches when he straightens up to biff an opponent.

Glen will have to be a great battler to win the Golden Gloves heavyweight title this year, for just when his reputation began to spread out around Chicagoland, word came trickling in from Peoria and Streator that the heavyweight champions from those tournament centers are also mighty men.

Mr. Harris Is Plenty Tough.

Peoria's heavyweight king is a giant Negro lad by the name of Dave Harris, who hails from Galesburg, Ill. He weighs nearly 200 pounds, and old time fighting men around Peoria and Galesburg say that he hits as hard as Jack Johnson did when Li'l Arthuh was in his prime. The foes he encountered in the Peoria Journal Transcript tournament were knocked kicking into the rosin dust, where they continued to hear the birdies chirp.

"Big boy, look out, for here comes Aunt Mary Ann" is the warning Harris gives his opponents when he aims and shoots with his knockout punch.

The fellow who will man the big guns for the team which will represent the Streator Times is Rio Soldatel. He carries plenty of dynamite in his punch, but doesn't depend entirely on it for his victories. He can box with the speed of a lightweight. He weighs 190 and is a factory worker in Marseilles, Ill. He has an odd style of fighting close in that bewildered all the boys who fell before the attack which carried him through to the Streator championship.

Tonight the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette picks its team of champions. Tomorrow night the Rockford Morning Star team will be chosen, and on Wednesday night the Gary Post-Tribune and Benton Harbor News-Palladium conduct the finals of their sectional tournaments.

Judge Walter P. Steffen last night confirmed an announcement from Pittsburgh that he had agreed to continue as advisory football coach at Carnegie Tech. He will resume his duties "only whenever it is convenient for me to do so."

Last fall Judge Steffen terminated his connection with Carnegie Tech because of his Chicago judicial responsibilities. He said that he had agreed to return on the same basis as previously.

"I will not be able to be with the team for every game," Judge Steffen said. "I hope to have time for one week at Carnegie during the early fall training period."

SCHAAF MATCH TOPS WEEK ON FISTIC FRONT

New York, Feb. 21.—(AP)—For the first time since his defeat by Heavyweight Champion Max Schmeling, W. L. [Young] Stribling of Macon, Ga., will engage in a major match this week.

The Georgian, stopped by Schmeling in the 15th round at Cleveland in July last year, will meet Ernie Schaaf, Boston contender, in a ten round bout at Chicago Stadium on Friday night.

A year ago Stribling would have been a standout against Schaaf, but this time the chances are he will enter the ring on the short end of the betting. Schaaf has grown into a punishing and effective hitter, perhaps the most promising heavyweight in the business.

Battalino in Action.

St. Louis, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Hollywood and New York also contribute important programs during the week.

At St. Louis Wednesday, Christopher [Bat] Battalino, former featherweight champion, still under suspension by the National Boxing association for his unsatisfactory match with Freddie Miller at Cincinnati, will meet Billy Shaw of Minneapolis in a ten round match. Miller will appear on the same card, facing Johnny Datto of Cleveland.

At San Francisco tomorrow Max Baer, Oakland heavyweight, meets Tom Heeney, veteran New Zealander; at Los Angeles Tuesday Ace Hudkins, former Nebraska wildcat, comes back in a ten rounder against Lee Rammage, San Diego heavyweight; at Hollywood Friday, Fidel La Barba of Los Angeles, former flyweight champion, meets Varias Milling, Filipino featherweight.

Thursday—At Tacoma, Wash., Lee Page vs. Jimmy Britt, welterweights, 6.

Dempsey Leaves to Box Wine on Louisville Card

Jack Dempsey left last night for Louisville where he boxes Frankie Wine of Butte, Mont., tomorrow. On Wednesday Dempsey will address the Kentucky legislature at Frankfort, where he will be the guest of Lieut. Gov. A. B. Chandler. Dempsey will discuss the provisions of a boxing and wrestling bill pending before the lawmakers.

Ace Hudkins, who whipped King Levinsky at Mills Stadium last summer, boxes Lee Rammage at Los Angeles tomorrow night. George Blake will referee the bout. It will be the second time Blake has refereed since the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling title bout at Cleveland last July.

Mickey Walker, heavyweight contender, and Roy [Ace] Clark, 215 pound Negro, signed yesterday to meet at Denver, March 8. Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, boxes Jackie Horner of St. Louis, on the same card.

Former Big 10 Stars Compete in Guards' Meet

Athletes who won national recognition while competing for Western conference schools are coming back to their old stamping grounds Thursday in the Illinois National Guard and Naval Reserve track meet at the 124th Field Artillery armory. They will make their reappearances as members of the strong team entered by the Los Angeles Athletic club.

Heading the list of former Big Ten performers is George Simpson of Ohio State, who has equaled the world record for the 100 yard dash. Others are Verne McDermont, who pole vaulted for Illinois, and Orval Martin, conference mile champion while at Purdue.

Other members of the Los Angeles team are Bob Maxwell, holder of the American record of 23 5-10 seconds for the 220 yard hurdles; Wendall Smith, another leading hurdler; James Gordon, former Miami university quarter miler; Richard Pomeroy, hurdler and quarter miler, and Parker Selby, formerly of Oklahoma university.

The 880 yard high school relay has brought out a large field with Maine Township High school, last year's winner, back to defend its honors. The following Chicago high schools have entered teams: Senn, Tilden, Hyde Park, Lane, Austin, Schurz, and Senger.

ARMAND TAKES BRYDSON'S PLACE FOR SHAMROCKS

Paul Armand will replace Capt. Gordie Brydson when the Shamrocks meet the Duluth Hornets at the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night. Brydson was automatically suspended for one game when he received his third major penalty of the season Saturday night for fighting with Charlie Langlois, of the Tulsa Oilers.

Armand will team with Donnie McFadyen and Bert Clayton. He is a clever stick-handler. Paul is 20 years old, the youngest member of the Shamrock squad.

The Shamrocks are now one game behind the Kansas City Pla-Mors in the American hockey league. They have won seven and tied one out of their last nine games. Against the Hornets tomorrow they will be seeking their fifth straight victory. Duluth is in third place, having recently gone ahead of the St. Louis Fliers.

NEW CLEW SEEN IN BOSTON GIRL'S DEATH IN EUROPE

Believes She Sent Hoax Messages to Self.

[Copyright: 1932: By the Associated Press.]

Boston, Mass., Feb. 21.—(AP)—New light was shed upon the mysterious death in the Mediterranean of Elizabeth Barrett Cook, 20 year old Boston society girl, today by G. B. Beak, British consul general here. He expressed belief the girl had sent the hoax messages to herself.

Mr. Beak said an examination of the two messages Miss Cook received at Naples, just prior to sailing for this country aboard the steamship Chinese Prince, showed them to have been Italian telegrams rather than cablegrams as at first believed.

The messages told Miss Cook of the supposed death at Boston of her fiancé, St. George Arnold, 26, an electrical engineer whom she was soon to wed, and urged her not to return to this country. They were signed, "Helen James."

Delivered Aboard Ship.

Mr. Beak emphasized that his belief that she had written them herself was only his own conjecture, and did not attempt to explain it. The messages were upon the usual Italian telegraph forms, typewritten, and had apparently been handed in at Capri, not far from Naples, Mr. Beak said. Both messages were delivered aboard the ship. One was received by the master, Captain Howard Uncles, and the other presumably by the purser.

Both were read to Miss Cook over the telephone at her hotel in Naples a few hours before the ship sailed for Boston on Feb. 4. She received them in person when she came aboard. Their text has not been made public.

Mr. Beak said the girl's death on the ship as it neared Gibraltar was, in his belief, due entirely to pneumonia. In the face of expressed medical opinion that the apparent symptoms of pneumonia can be caused by overdose of certain kinds of tablets designed to alleviate headache and restlessness, Mr. Beak said he would await the report of the inquest now in progress at Gibraltar before reaching a definite opinion on that point.

Organs to Be Analyzed.

A quantity of such tablets was reported to have been found among Miss Cook's effects in her stateroom. Her vital organs are being subjected to chemical analysis by British medical authorities at Gibraltar, where the inquest has been adjourned to await the result.

The Chinese prince, with five other passengers who had boarded it at Naples, reached Boston yesterday after a stormy trip. Immediately after making port Capt. Uncles, accompanied by representatives of the steamship line, Mr. Arnold, his counsel, Edmund L. Twomey, Miss Cook's uncle, Albert Carroll, and an attorney for Miss Cook's estate met at the British consulate, where Mr. Beak, acting informally, presided over a private meeting of all concerned.

The five passengers aboard the ship agreed in the main with the belief of the captain that Miss Cook had died of pneumonia; although one of them, Robert Beahm, Philadelphia engineer, said he had been told positively by the port surgeon at Gibraltar that the girl had committed suicide with a poison unknown to him.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: The Other Side

SOVIETS BANISH TROTZKY AND 36 OTHERS FOR LIFE

Citizenship Is Stripped "for All Time."

MOSCOW, Feb. 21. — (AP) — Leon Trotzky and 36 other Russian émigrés living abroad were formally stripped of their soviet citizenship today and forbidden "for all time" to enter the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. The action was taken by the presidium of the central executive committee.

In the case of Trotzky, the action was a mere formality, for he was banished permanently from the soviet union two years ago and sent to Istanbul, Turkey, where he since has lived.

Trotzky was banished after an open split with Joseph Stalin, Russia's strong man. He became a leader of the left wingers, who preached a doctrine of world revolution as a necessity before socialism could be built in one country.

Thorn in Soviet Side.

Since his residence in Turkey Trotzky has been a constant thorn in the side of the soviet government by his biting criticisms, both written and spoken, of the policies pursued by the Kremlin.

As a result "Trotzykism" has become a byword here for the slightest manifestation of any opposition to Stalin. Numerous strayers from the straight line of the communist party have been branded thus and punished as followers of the former war commissar in the days of Lenin.

Mensheviks Banned.

Other former soviet citizens who fell under today's ban were identified as Mensheviks or their sympathizers. Few of them are well known. They included Raphael Abramovitch, long associated with soviet activities outside of Russia, and Feodor Dan, whose name once was linked with a "plot charge" by the soviets.

The official announcement was most perfunctory, merely stating:

"The presidium of the central executive committee has deprived of soviet citizenship for counter-revolutionary activity together with the prohibition to enter the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics on documents given any foreign countries, 37 émigrés living abroad and having kept soviet passports." It then named as "among them" the various émigrés, placing Trotzky's name last.

HIT-RUN AUTO KILLS WOMAN IN MIDWAY CRASH

An automobile operated by a hit and run driver crashed into another car containing three women on the Midway at Ellis avenue last night, killing one of the women and probably fatally injuring another.

The woman killed was Mrs. Minnie Maloney, 29 years old, of 6336 Ellis avenue. Her companion who was hurt is Miss Sadie Manley, 50 years old, of 6937 Kenwood avenue. The third woman, Mrs. Lucille Shurpet, 32 years old, of 7110 Cornell avenue, escaped with minor bruises. All were taken to the Billings Memorial hospital.

Two or three men were in the hit and run automobile. They abandoned the car several blocks away, and fled on foot. Police traced the license number to a man living in Stony Island avenue near 68th street.

Jackie Demos, 2 years old, of 297 Court street, Kankakee, died this morning in the Westlake hospital, Melrose Park. He was injured last night when a car driven by his mother, Mrs. Mildred Brazer, struck an abutment of the Illinois Central railroad at Manheim and Roosevelt roads, Westchester.

A street car motorman and a woman passenger were killed early yesterday in a collision between the car and a truck at 75th street and South Chicago avenue. Details of the accident appear elsewhere. Their deaths, that of Mrs. Maloney, and one other raised the Cook county motor toll to 164 since Jan. 1.

FUNERAL TODAY FOR S. B. ALLISON, SCHOOL OFFICIAL

Funeral services for S. B. Allison, who was for nearly thirty-five years a teacher and executive of the Chicago school system, will be held today at 11 a. m. in the family residence, 6148 Woodlawn avenue.

Mr. Allison, who was 70 years old, died Saturday at home after a brief illness of heart disease. He came to Chicago in 1895. He was principal of the Riverdale, Keith and Walsh schools and in 1913 was made superintendent of special schools.

In 1917 he was made head of the schools' department of statistics, with the rank of assistant superintendent. In 1919 he was made principal of the Louis Champlin school in Englewood, a post he held until his retirement about a year ago.

Mr. Allison is survived by his widow, one son, Prof. S. K. Allison of the University of Chicago, and a daughter, Mrs. William A. Douglas.

ARGENTINA HAILS DEPOSED HEAD HOME FROM EXILE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Feb. 21.—President Augustin P. Justo's troubles began within a few hours of his inauguration when sensational afternoon papers—taking advantage of the cessation of the "state of siege"—attacked former Provisional President José Uriburu's police department.

They charged the police tortured political prisoners in order to extract information of their comrades' activities. Since there are many indications that there is a certain amount of truth in these charges, an official investigation of them is virtually inevitable.

Meantime the resuscitated newspaper Critica's sensational handling of the abuses as well as a fiery onslaught on Uriburu personally created an atmosphere of excitement which was increased by the release of the deposed president, Dr. Hipolito Yrigoyen, who arrived during the night and is now at the home of his nephew, Luiser Yrigoyen.

The former president's arrival was awaited by a large crowd of enthusiastic followers who broke through the police cordon and swarmed over the automobile eager to shake the old man's hand. The windows of the car were smashed by the throng.

Yrigoyen appeared to be in good health after his long confinement at Martin Garcia island. He preserved his old time impassibility by greeting the followers with a wave of the hand and a grim smile. Nevertheless the old man's stoical bearing broke down momentarily when he embraced his sister.

Meanwhile dyed in the wool radicals, encouraged by the retirement of their ach enemy, Uriburu, became more truculent and openly demanded new elections in the provinces of Buenos Aires and Mendoza which they claim were fraudulently won by the national democrats.

ATTORNEY PLANS FIGHT ON $700,000 HENDERSON WILL

Attorney John P. Hart of Aurora announced last night that he had been retained by relatives of Mrs. Fannie Bishop Henderson to file court proceedings to break her will which disposed of an estate valued at $700,000 and provided for the founding of an old people's home.

Mrs. Henderson, 80 years old, widow of William Henderson, died last May 29. Her estate included large business properties in Aurora and farm lands. Her will was filed last June. Except for several small annuities and minor bequests, the estate was left to construct a home on the Henderson property, just outside of Aurora, on the Lincoln highway. The will provided that the home was to shelter elderly married couples particularly.

Minnie Stegeman, Mother of Police Lieutenant, Dies

Mrs. Minnie Stegeman, 77 years old, 4103 North Narragansett avenue, mother of Acting Police Lieutenant William Stegeman of the West North avenue station, died in her home last night after an illness of several weeks. Mrs. Stegeman came to the United States from Germany when she was 17 years old, and during her 60 years' residence in Chicago was active in the affairs of German-American organizations. Three sons and a daughter survive.

BLIND MUSICIAN LOSES WIFE TO MAN HE AIDED

Clinton Sabin is blind. He plays an accordion on the streets for pennies. But Eva, his wife, no longer guides his steps. She ran away last week with a man whom Sabin had given refuge in their home. He wept as he told the story yesterday at the detective bureau.

"My wife is a pretty woman," he said. "The man she ran away with is named Albert Beczar. He came to me a few weeks ago and told me he was a bootlegger, and that he was afraid that some other bootleggers were going to take him for a ride.

"He said he wanted a place where he could live quietly for a while, and I took him into my home at 1225 West Adams street. He used to stay with the children when my wife led me about the streets playing my accordion.

"I couldn't see, but I sensed that Beczar and my wife were becoming friendly, and one day I entered a room suddenly and caught her in his arms. I forgave her, because I loved her.

"Last Monday my wife told me that our collections on the street were falling so low that we would have to move to a smaller flat. She took me to a room at 1422 West Adams street and left me there.

"Later in the day she sent our daughter, Ruth, who is 9 years old, to me with a message. She said that she didn't love me any more, and was going away with Beczar.

Freer Credit Conditions Are Cited.

New York, Feb. 21.—(AP)—There was nothing last week to show that business had as yet turned for the better, but surveys disclosed a growing belief that a reversal of the trend is not far off.

Out of the maze of industrial and banking reports there appeared to be one thing in common—an expression of confidence that the long awaited revival would not be held back later than next fall. The two leading weekly trade reviews said in effect that business was still waiting, but, unlike the weary waiting that has characterized many past weeks, there was evident a sprightlier undertone of expectancy and hope.

One large investment organization which periodically makes a private nation-wide survey involving personal canvass of key industrial centers wound up its painstaking studies with the conclusion that business appears now to be getting in shape for recovery not later than this autumn.

Collections Are Slow.

Collections were reported slow, the effect naturally being to hamper credit operations, but against this continuation of a long familiar past condition industrialists turned with attentive eyes and ears to the steps being taken in Washington to relax credit.

The automobile industry has shown a distinctly more cheerful attitude following the Ford announcement of production plans. A further statement from the industry disclosing the prospect that continued reduction of prices might be at or near an end was furnished by Studebaker corporation, which announced that an increase in prices had been ordered. What was interpreted as a significant feature of this announcement was the informal intimation that steel manufacturers were this year unwilling to reduce their present price levels to a figure where profits are completely sacrificed in order to get business.

Meet More Success.

It was recalled that Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem, had said at the last directors' meeting of that company that conditions would not be so bad for the industry if it could work for "even a little profit."

A fair degree of animation was reported in the retail trade, sluggishness continued to prevail in the heavy industries, collections were slow, steel output showed little improvement, but, underlying all this, there was a moderate upturn in commodity prices and reflection of greater hopefulness as to the future.

CURB MARKET STOCKS UNEVEN IN WEEK'S TRADE

New York, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The curb market underwent frequent changes of trend last week, fluctuating nervously as traders shifted position.

Heaviness in the first day or two reflected the market's inability to maintain the rise of the previous week-end and an assortment of rather sharp declines appeared on this reaction. News of the stock exchange's rule on borrowing of stock brought considerable covering into Friday's early trading, but this demand was easily satisfied.

Electric Bond and Share traded briskly all the week. Interest in the issue was stirred by the proposal to reduce the common capitalization through exchanging one new share of $5 par value for three shares of the present no-par stock. Bond and Share's preferred equities showed considerable strength, but the junior shares became heavy toward the week-end, dropping about 3 points from their earlier high of 13¼.

Other stocks affected by news developments included Stromberg Carlson, which sagged on omission of the dividend, and Mead Johnson. The latter was helped by an earnings statement showing $7.66 a share in 1931 against $9.51 for 1930, but still well above the dividend requirement. American Cigar, reported under accumulation by American Tobacco, rallied to a new high for the year. Chesebrough firmed on declaration of the usual extra dividend.

STEEL MAKERS AWAIT BUYING BY RAILROADS

Cleveland, O., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Lack of substantial railroad and automotive demands continues the chief handicap of steel producers, yet this lack suggests an element of future strength, the magazine Steel said today.

"Current production," the magazine continued, "virtually represents minimum needs of important outlets for steel other than the railroads and automobile manufacturers. These needs apparently will go no lower, while any change in the transportation industries must be on the side of improvement."

Steelmaking operations declined 2 per cent to a level of 25 per cent of capacity last week and probably will remain at the same rate this week, the magazine said.

"Further denoting the conviction of steelmakers that despite the current easing in production the entire situation is less taut, is the stabilization of heavy finished steel prices," the magazine added. "On bars, plates and shapes producers are withdrawing all quotations under 1.60c, Pittsburgh or equivalent, and will book through the second quarter on this basis."

WHEAT RISES, DESPITE BIG GRAIN SUPPLY

Reaches Best Price Since November.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

News that under normal conditions would have had little effect on the wheat market was largely responsible for an advance last week to the highest figures since late in November on the May and July deliveries and to a new high for the season on the September.

Both the grain and the stock markets have felt the effect of the action of congress in passing legislation which may improve general business, but not one of the laws, as the trade see it, has a direct bearing on the supply and demand position of wheat.

Wheat traders who have made a thorough analysis of the world situation claim that the statistical position at the present time is fundamentally decidedly bearish, and this situation cannot be changed as long as there is such a superabundance of grain. On the other hand they believe the developments in the future may be bullish.

Await Crop Scare Period.

With economic and political developments dominating the market, wheat traders claim it is not surprising that prices have fluctuated in a most erratic manner. For several years the trend of the wheat market has been affected to a large extent by financial conditions, and also the operations of the government.

Regardless of whether the foreigner buys cash wheat on a large scale or not, statisticians figure there is so much grain available that consumption cannot be expanded sufficiently to absorb the surplus as compared with normal during the current crop season. Only a decided shortage in yield next year, they believe, will bring it down to a point where it will cease to be a burden.

May Change Situation.

On account of the possibility that a shortage in the American crop might change the whole world situation, the trade is starting to pay more attention to the probable outcome of winter wheat in the southwest. While it is still a month or 6 weeks before there will have been sufficient growing weather to determine whether there will be heavy abandonment or not, official reports have suggested there is reason to believe the poor start made in the western third of Kansas has not been overcome by the unusually favorable weather conditions during the winter.

With the federal farm board holding practically all the excess world's surplus wheat as compared with normal stocks, the trade believes the market will be unusually sensitive to developments, indicating ways and means may be found to get rid of it such as through converting it into live stock feed.

Discount Denaturing Scheme.

It is claimed that the scheme for denaturing the wheat or rendering it uninviting for human consumption is not finding favor in some quarters due to fears of arousing antagonism of corn belt farmers. It is believed the later would not take kindly to the suggestion that wheat be turned into live stock feed.

Wheat prices held within a range of around ½c for the week and closed ¼@1¼c higher as compared with the finish of the previous week. March finished at 58¼@58⅜c; May, 61½@61⅝c; July, 62⅜@62⅝c, and September, 64½@64⅝c.

Corn Prices Lower.

Many corn traders continue to operate on the bear side of the market due more to the lack of an aggressive eastern cash demand than any other influence. Stocks at terminal markets continue to pile up despite an abnormally small movement from the interior, and even the advance in wheat and the congressional efforts to help general business have failed to stimulate aggressive buying.

Liquidation by longs in the March corn delivery was under way late in the week and it closed at 36¼c, showing a loss of 1½c from a week ago. Distant months were ⅝@¾c lower, with May 40⅛@40¼c, July 42⅝c, and September 43⅞c.

Oats futures again held within narrow limits, following corn in a rather leisurely manner within a range of a little over 1c per bu. With the exception of seeding reported as under way in southeastern Kansas the general situation was regarded as showing little change.

Ordinary Life Insurance Policy Sales Increasing

January sales of ordinary life insurance continued an upward trend, gaining 1 per cent over January, 1931. Every section of the country was affected. The figures were compiled by the Life Insurance Sales Research bureau at Hartford, Conn., based on figures for companies representing 88 per cent of the total legal reserve ordinary life insurance in force in the country.

Brokers Debate Corporations' Buying Back Own Stocks

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 20.—A controversy concerning the advisability of allowing corporations whose shares are listed on the New York Stock exchange to purchase their own stock in the open market has been stimulated among brokers in Wall street by the annual reports recently issued by many companies, which show that such purchases reached a new high record last year.

A majority of industrial companies' reports show they purchased their own stock during 1931. Many of the purchases, brokers believe, were inspired by the drastic depreciation of security prices, and the feeling among executives that in buying their own shares they were making wise investments.

See Many Abuses.

Critics of the practice charge, however, that purchases of stock have absorbed a large proportion of the liquid assets in some instances. The critics also feel that these purchases leave the door open to so many abuses, that the stock exchange should provide rules covering these transactions. The exchange issued rules last year concerning investment trusts' purchases of their own shares, but no announcement has been made concerning the exchange's attitude toward such operations by other types of companies. Brokers who are opposed to the practice declare that they have gathered the impression that some of the officials of the exchange would like to see these purchases regulated.

In some quarters, however, it is felt that the questions involved are so complex, that regulation of the repurchase of stock would be extremely difficult.

Shares for Employés.

It is generally agreed that no criticism may be leveled against companies which purchase their own stock in the open market for the definite purpose of reoffering the shares to employés, or for the acquisition of new properties. The brokers feel, however, that corporations should not be allowed to dip into their cash resources merely to support the market value of their shares. There is also outspoken criticism of what some brokers describe as excessive speculative activity by some managements in the shares of their own companies.

Criticism of the purchase by a company of its own stock is based on three counts: First, it is felt that such commitments frequently weaken the cash position of a company and endanger its credit standing and future growth; second, these operations tend to divert the attention of officers of the company from business problems to the speculative gyrations of the stock market; and third, the purchases permit many abuses, such as the use of the corporation's fund to buy shares owned by directors, officers, and other persons friendly to the management.

Supporting Own Stock.

When a company purchases its own stock in the open market, the buying, brokers believe, should not be used to support the price of the stock in a declining market, or to advance it unduly in a strong market. Scale buying orders present fewer abuses, on the whole, than purchasing which is designed to peg the price of the shares.

FIGHT FOR CONTROL OF STANDARD OIL OF KAS. ENDED BY AGREEMENT

Topeka, Kas., Feb. 21.—(AP)—An agreement in the struggle for control of the Standard Oil company [Kansas] was announced tonight by Robert Stone, attorney for C. B. Wrightsman of Tulsa, Okla., director and organizer of a stockholders' committee.

Wrightsman, a director of the company two years and owner of 10 per cent of its stock, took issue with business policies of the present management. The company has confined its activities largely to refining, and Wrightsman favored its entrance into the retail and production fields.

Stone claimed tonight a victory for Wrightsman. Under the agreement, the board of directors will be reorganized. Three members of the new board will be nominated by the stockholders' committee, and two by the present management. The directors nominated by the stockholders committee are Wrightsman, Lionel T. Barneson of California and A. H. Bunker of New York. Barneson and Bunker will succeed Earle W. Evans of Wichita, Kas., and E. A. Metcalf of Neodesha, Kas.

A. S. Hopkins, president of the company, and E. A. Warren, vice president, both of Neodesha, were nominated by the present management for the two other positions on the new board.

Indorsed jointly by both factions, the nominations will be submitted to the annual meeting of stockholders, March 9. The agreement was signed by Hopkins, Warren, Evans, Wrightsman, Cyrus Bell, and Barneson. The latter two were associated with Wrightsman on the stockholders committee.

CITY'S LEADERS TO BACK LEGION IN JOB CAMPAIGN

A program correlating civic, financial, and industrial agencies with the unemployment relief plan of the American Legion will be considered today at a meeting in the Mid-Day club in the First National bank building.

Mayor Cermak, George W. Rossetter, president of the association of commerce, and other leaders will meet with officers of the Legion and of the Chicago and Illinois Federations of Labor. It is proposed to start a "Chicago Campaign for Reëmployment of Men and Money." Preliminary meetings have been held with neighborhood business associations and plans suggested will be discussed at today's meeting.

Among plans considered will be a city organization, using Legion post club rooms as centers. Jobs will be obtained by a house to house neighborhood campaign and cleared through the various posts.

Copper Mart Unaffected by Week's Developments

While many of the commodity markets felt the stimulus of the week's constructive developments in the credit situation, the copper market remained unaffected, both as to prices and buying volume. Due to the apathy of consumers second hand copper has again appeared at 6 cents a pound, according to trade reports. This compares with an official selling price of 6¼ cents, delivered, to the end of June. Export prices continue at 6⅝ cents.

January Zinc Production for World Is Up Slightly

MANUFACTURERS OPPOSE U. S. AID TO PANAMA LINE

Illinois manufacturers, whose taxes help meet the annual deficits of the government owned Panama Railroad Steamship line, are deprived by the operation of the line of their rightful share in $25,000,000 worth of purchases made annually for the canal, Samuel M. Hastings, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, complained yesterday.

His complaint was in a letter to the appropriations committee of the house of representatives, which has a request before it that the government meet the annual deficit of the steamship line, which this year is several hundred thousand dollars. He urged that congress refuse further appropriations to meet losses in operation of the steamers, and also that appropriations for the canal itself provide that its supplies be purchased hereafter on a basis of delivery at the canal.

At present these supplies are bought on a basis of delivery in New York, where they are stowed on the subsidized government steamers for delivery to the canal. On this basis, midwestern manufacturers cannot compete with eastern companies, Mr. Hastings said. They could if purchases were on the basis of delivery at the canal, since New Orleans, the shipment point for midwestern consignments to Panama, is 600 miles closer to the canal than New York, he pointed out.

FLEXIBLE SHAFT REPORTS BETTER EARNINGS NOW

Sales of the Chicago Flexible Shaft company since the first of this year have been running ahead of the corresponding period of 1931, M. W. McArdle, president, says in a letter sent to stockholders with the company's report for last year.

The report shows profit of $185,854 for 1931, equivalent to $1.02 a share on the 179,882 shares of common stock outstanding. This was an increase over the preceding year. Then the concern earned net profits of $176,562 or 98 cents a share on the same capitalization. Dividend payments were suspended during the year after 75 cents a share had been paid. Surplus at the close of the year stood at $990,516 compared with $929,847 at the close of 1930.

Current assets at the end of the year were $1,069,844, including $78,332 cash and $608,836 accounts receivable as against current liabilities of $411,656. At the close of the preceding year the firm had current assets of $879,365 and current liabilities of $218,892.

Bank loans at the close of the fiscal year, which ended Dec. 26, stood at $145,000. Considerable reduction has been made in the loans since that time, President McArdle says in his report.

Control of Public Utilities to Be Discussed on April 8

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—A movement to "provide an adequate forum for the exchange of views" on the effectiveness of regulation of public utilities by state commissions will be launched here on April 8 and 9. This was announced today by Morris Llewellyn Cooke. The forum, according to Mr. Cooke, "is sponsored by a group of 12 of the leading exponents of public regulation in the country."

SURVEY PUTS 1930 INCOME PER PERSON BELOW RATE OF 1913

The total national income for 1930, estimated by the National Industrial Conference board at 71 billion dollars in terms of actual or current dollars, showed a decrease of 16.4 per cent compared with 1929. In terms of the 1913 dollar the decrease was 13.1 per cent. The income per person of those having gainful occupations in 1930 was 17.6 per cent less in actual dollars than it was in 1929, while in terms of the 1913 dollar it was 14.4 per cent less. The per capita income was also 17.6 per cent less in actual dollars in 1930 compared with 1929 and 14.3 per cent less in terms of the 1913 dollar.

Those figures, issued by the board, a privately supported organization, the first year of the depression, were made public yesterday to supplement the board's annual statement on national wealth and income.

In 1920 the average income of every person in the United States having a gainful occupation was in actual dollars $1,778, and in terms of the 1913 dollar $898. In 1930 the average income of those gainfully occupied was $1,452 in actual dollars, a decrease of 18.3 per cent compared with 1920, while in terms of the 1913 dollar it was $941, or an increase of 4.8 per cent as compared with 1920.

GOODYEAR HEAD URGES ADOPTION OF SIX HOUR DAY

Adoption of the six hour working day in all industries in which it is applicable was advocated by P. W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, in a statement issued yesterday.

The plan has enabled the Goodyear company to keep 3,000 men on the pay roll who otherwise would have been thrown out of work, Mr. Litchfield said. After trying several plans during the last eighteen months, the six hour program definitely has proved the best from the standpoint of manufacturing efficiency, he added. The Godyear plant at Akron, O., which normally employs 15,000 to 18,000 men, is now running four shifts a day of six hours each.

"While the short hour day may not be applicable to every industry, or all parts of the same industry, I am convinced that if generally adopted it would put millions of men into positions where they would be self-supporting," Mr. Litchfield declared.

Cubans Insist Java Cut Sugar Crop for 1932

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Feb. 21.—Cuba has rejected officially Java's latest counter proposal for world sugar stablization. The directors of the National Institute and the Sugar Exporting corporation, after a joint meeting, called the offer "not even worth the consideration that has been accorded it." Word was sent that Java must curtail 1932 production 15 or 20 per cent or Cuba will immediately withdraw from the International Institute. On Tuesday President Machado is expected to sign the decree definitely setting Cuba's 1932 production at 3,061,000 tons.

UNITED STATES ISSUES ADVANCE IN BOND MARKET

Gov't Group Aided by Credit Program.

New York, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The principal feature of the bond market last week was the strength of United States government issues which, in some instances, added as much as 5 points to their prices.

Various factors tended to uplift the federal category. The principal one, however, was the Glass-Steagall credit expansion bill which investors interpreted as meaning the inauguration of an easy money policy and the legalization of government securities for the issuance of currency by the federal reserve banks.

At the same time the proposal to issue "baby bonds" with small interest bearing coupons as a method of combating hoarding did much to revive the long term Liberties and treasuries. There was some profit taking in the treasury list at the weekend, but, as a whole, most of the earlier established gains were retained.

Utilities Show Life.

Public utility mortgages, which have been somewhat dormant, also exhibited signs of life and prices of communications and gas and electric companies moved to higher levels. American Telephone and Consolidated Gas loans especially were in demand.

The railroad department moved uncertainly, with the low priced liens, which have recorded substantial gains in the last few weeks, declining moderately under apparent realizing. The higher grade transportation mortgages, however, were firm. Followers of the rail section were encouraged by the announcement that there was an increase of some 13,000 car loadings for the week ending Feb. 6.

Industrials Are Easy.

Industrial bonds generally were easy, although issues of Remington Rand, Chile Copper, International Match, and Armour & Co. worked higher. The oils also were better, with the Standard group being favored.

Irregularity prevailed in the foreign list. South Americans attracted considerable buying, with the Argentines and Brazilians moving to higher levels. The far eastern situation adversely affected Japanese bonds, some of which declined to new lows for the year. European obligations were mixed.

Germany's Budget Reveals Deficit Exceeding Billion

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Feb. 21.—The ordinary budget of the Reich in the monthly statement shows a deficit of 95,000,000 marks for the first nine months of the fiscal year. In the extraordinary budget the deficit is 115,000,000. Including the deficits carried over from preceding years the shortage now amounts to 1,187,000,000 marks.

France Draws Gold as U. S. Boosts Trade

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 21.—With the enactment of the Glass-Steagall bill assured, Wall street is awaiting with keen interest the first indications of what use the federal reserve intends to make of its new powers. Some definite sign may be expected with the opening of business tomorrow, in the the reserve bank will have to take action if it wishes to forestall a rise in open market bill rates.

In mid-January the federal reserve bank of New York reduced its bill-buying rate by one-quarter of 1 per cent, forcing down open market rates in a move that was generally interpreted as the opening of an aggressive anti-deflation campaign. It was expected that the reserve would pursue this policy through purchases of United States government securities and through direct appeal to the member banks of the system to check their destructive policy of liquidation.

France Takes Gold.

Abroad, the reserve's efforts were at once interpreted as a step toward inflation and a new run upon the dollar began. The Bank of France announced its intention of repatriating its stores of earmarked gold; the franc and other European exchanges advanced above their gold export points and gold began to flow out of the country in volume.

Faced with this heavy outward movement of gold, the federal reserve was compelled to go slowly. The rediscount rates of the federal reserve banks of Richmond and Dallas, which had been at 4 per cent, were reduced to 3½ per cent, establishing a uniform rate throughout the system, but nothing further was done. The reserve was powerless to purchase United States government securities because to do so would have seriously reduced its "free gold," which was already below $500,000,000, at a time when Europe was calling home its balances in the form of gold.

Increases "Free Gold."

This situation was one of the principal reasons for the formulating of the Glass-Steagall bill. The bill, by authorizing the federal reserve banks to pledge government securities as backing for federal reserve notes in excess of the minimum 40 per cent gold reserve, will make effective the large excess reserves of the system. It will increase the amount of "free gold" from about $430,000,000 to about $1,200,000,000.

The question that now arises in banking circles is whether the federal reserve, being freed of the artificial restrictions which previously checked its efforts to combat the deflation, through open market operations, will take them up again at the point where the French gold withdrawals interrupted them. In the meantime the Reconstruction corporation has swung into action and provisions have been made in the Glass-Steagall bill to enable member banks to tap the credit reservoir of the system by means not formerly available.

Midland Steel Reports Deficit After '31 Dividends

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 21.—The pamphlet report of the Midland Steel Products company for 1931 shows a net profit of $775,744 after provision for federal taxes, charges and depreciation, but a deficit of $111,796 after dividends on first preferred and on $2 dividend shares. Surplus was $1,948,926 on Dec. 31, 1931, after dividends of $709,395 on the common shares against $2,770,116 on Jan. 1, 1931. Manufacturing profit was $2,042,536 and operating profit was $1,418,659.

UPTURN IN BUILDING PERMITS FOLLOWS WAGE CUT DECISION

A sharp upturn in building permits, following the action of the building trade unions in accepting a 20 per cent cut in wages, and a marked increase in the number of out of town manufacturers seeking factory and warehouse sites in Chicago, were the chief sources of optimism in the Chicago business world last week, according to the Chicago Association of Commerce.

In the retail field local sales showed recessions that were balanced somewhat by more pronounced interest by buyers from other sections of the country. During the first two days of the week six building permits, representing a valuation of several hundred thousand dollars, were issued. This was a notable improvement over the first two weeks in the month, when building permit figures almost reached the zero point.

Indications that the Chicago Janitors' union and the electrical workers will follow the other union groups in scaling down their wage levels is also haled as another step forward by Chicago business organizations.

The best news in Chicago's industrial field came from the chemical industry, where one large manufacturer announced the doubling of its plant capacity and the adoption of a triple working shift to fill foreign orders.

COMMERCE BOARD TO RESUME GAS RATE HEARINGS

Hearings before the Illinois commerce commission to determine the rates to be charged by the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company for its new mixture of natural and artificial gas will be resumed tomorrow after a recess of several weeks.

In the interval since the last hearing Assistant Corporation Counsel Grossman and the city's gas experts have been analyzing the testimony and exhibits submitted to the commission by the gas company's witnesses. Tomorrow Mr. Grossman will cross-examine those witnesses in an effort to have the commission set a schedule of rates lower than those for which the company has petitioned.

In its petition the company offers a rate reduction of 3½ per cent for cooking gas and 22 per cent for heating gas. In a temporary order the commission fixed the reduction at 6½ per cent for the cooking gas and 31 per cent for the heating gas. Further hearings may result in a still greater reduction, Mr. Grossman said.

Even with the price rates fixed by the commission in effect, complaints that the gas bills are larger than formerly have continued to pour into the offices of the commission, the city's department of public service, and THE TRIBUNE'S Voice of the People department.

"FRISCO" CALLS TAXES $48 ON EACH $100 NET

The 1931 taxes of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway company totaled $4,308,716.79, an amount equal to $46.91 out of every $100 of net railway operating income the road earned in 1931, according to a report filed with the interstate commerce commission by those lines.

Characterizing the taxes of his railway as the largest in the road's history when compared with earnings, J. M. Kurn, president of the Frisco lines, today said that the taxes were becoming "unbearable" and that relief must be obtained.

France Still Drawing Credits from Rome Market

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

ROME, Feb. 21.—The policy now steadily pursued by the Bank of France in withdrawing its credits from foreign markets does not, to this market's mind, find justification in any real necessity. It is ascribed rather to financial or governmental apprehension and is sometimes imputed to resentment at the increasing political isolation into which the French nation is drifting.

TRADE INDICES UNAFFECTED BY RELIEF PLANS

Securities React to U. S. Measures.

The principal securities and commodities markets throughout the country will be closed today in observance of Washington's birthday. Banks also will be closed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 21.—The irregularity of last week's advance on the stock exchange, and the lack of any distinct change in the business situation, have possibly caused disappointment. Yet whenever relief measures of important scope have been applied to a time of severe economic depression, the immediate sequel has usually been the same.

Enthusiastic recovery on the stock exchange comes first. Its pace presently slackens; perhaps there are new declines. Simultaneously, watchers of the business movement begin to complain that the trade situation has not been helped at all.

Respond to Legislation.

In the present instance, the stock and bond markets, and to a less degree the speculative grain market, have responded unmistakably to the credit sustaining legislation at Washington—as they responded last October to the National Credit corporation plan. But the usual indices of reviving business activity were not visible in the sequel to last autumn's incidents and they have not been visible this month.

In the two months after last October, the reserve's board's bulletin reported production and employment as decreasing more than was usual at that season. Distribution of merchandise, reflected by weekly loadings of railway freight, has given no sign of increase; it is still running something like 20 per cent behind this time last year, and even last February's loadings were 19 per cent below 1930. The country's steel output has not increased from its very small year end figure as much as it did at this time in either 1931 or 1930.

Hesitancy of Business.

Retrospectively, the absence, on older similar occasions, of prompt and emphatic response in the way of trade revival to important relief measures of the kind has been explained by the slowness with which a revival of optimism by merchants and consumers is effected. More particularly, it has been ascribed to hesitancy of business men, pending evidence that the expedients for restoring credit and confidence were accomplishing their purpose.

The same explanations are available today. But probably it will be asked why there should seem to be no check to the present trade depression when it has already lasted fully two years. In February, 1922, which was less than two years after the beginning of that depression, carloadings were running well above those of a year before; in March of 1922 steel production overtopped March of 1921, and in November it exceeded 1920.

TELLS OF YEAR'S REORGANIZATION BY DOVENMUEHLE

BY AL CHASE.

What has been accomplished in a year's time in the real estate mortgage bond reorganization field was outlined last night by Stephen G. Cohn, who has been in direct charge of that branch of the activities of Dovenmuehle, Inc., Chicago mortgage banking house, for more than three-quarters of a century and sole loan correspondent in this area for several of the leading life insurance companies. During the last twelve months, Mr. Cohn states, Dovenmuehle, Inc., has either fully reorganized or completed work necessary to restore to solvent condition issues totaling $1,104,500.

In addition to aiding in the reorganization of outside properties Mr. Cohn states that his firm has refinanced nine of its own issues, totaling $225,500, all of which were reorganized by direct negotiation with equity owners, junior interests, and the bondholders, without the delay and expense of foreclosure proceedings. Dovenmuehle is one of the pioneers in the development of the liquidation trust plan, he said.

"We entered this type of work a year ago at the suggestion of Holman D. Pettibone, president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, who stated that mortgage companies whose own issues were in a strong position should lend their resources, time, and experience to aiding the realty bond situation generally," said Mr. Cohn.

In Three Brackets.

"The reorganizations Dovenmuehle has completed might be classified under three general headings. The first was extension-of-time committees in unusual situations and was carried on under the supervision of George H. Dovenmuehle. One $685,000 reorganization of this type has just been completed. This is the Raymond Park apartments, in Evanston, which was fully given in yesterday's TRIBUNE.

"The second type of reorganization work in which we've participated has been in straightening out a total of $194,000 in defaulted issues of the Hoppe Bond and Mortgage company. We were appointed collection agents for this company when it liquidated its business and also serve as a bondholders' committee, headed by Theodore A. Buenger, president of Dovenmuehle, Inc. We've been successful in working out two of these issues without a foreclosure and the third is nearing a like conclusion.

"The La Grange Park Plaza apartments, nineteen flats at 5th, Oak and Ashland avenues in La Grange, a $72,000 issue, presented an interesting case because it was the first trust to pay out in this district. It also paid to the depositing bondholders what comes pretty close to being a record settlement; a cash distribution amounting to $27 on every $100 bond, plus $90 in a new 5 per cent income bond, or a total settlement of $117 for every $100 originally invested.

All But $200 Deposited.

"The Lincolnwood Plaza apartments, nineteen suites, at the northwest corner of Rockwell and Farragut streets, an $82,000 issue, offered unusual possibilities when $81,800 of the bonds were deposited with the committee before a definite plan had been sent out. With all the bonds on hand, title was purchased from the owner for a nominal amount and the building has since been operated in such a way that two of the defaulted interest coupons already have been paid.

"As soon as the mortgage market conditions improve, it's the intention of the committee to place a reasonable loan on the property and turn all available cash over to the bondholders.

"The LeClaire apartments, twelve units, at the southeast corner of LeClaire and Altgeld, a $40,000 issue, is another Hoppe reorganization being worked out in practically the same way as the Lincolnwood Plaza. Title has been assigned to the bondholders, nearly all of whom have deposited and the building is being operated for their benefit.

All Ironed Out.

"A rare condition exits in the third class of work we've undertaken—the handling of our issues, under the supervision of Mr. Buenger. Difficulties confronting issues totaling $225,500 have been satisfactorily ironed out by following methods advocated by Mr. Buenger in an address before the Mortgage Bankers association last year, in which he suggested avoiding the expense and delay of foreclosure proceedings through reorganizing defaulted issues by direct negotiation with equity owners, junior interests and the bondholders. This work, although far more difficult than foreclosure and requiring much more skillful handling, is cheaper and generally quicker.

"The following Dovenmuehle properties have been reorganized without foreclosure or receivership and have been either paid off or placed back in solvent condition: Du Page building, $40,000; Powell apartments $30,000; Lunt apartments, $27,500; Logan apartments, $24,000; Marlowe building, $14,000; Burn building, $25,000; Erna apartments, $18,000; Highwood building, $34,000, and Harlem building, $13,000.

American Metals Reports $615,909 Deficit for 1931

New York, Feb. 21. — The annual report for 1931 of the American Metal company, Ltd., disclosed a deficit for the year, after interest and depreciation and depletion, of $615,909. This compares with net income in 1930 of $1,828,000. The company lists total current assets, as of Dec. 31, of $29,953,417, including $2,765,137 in cash, comparable with $32,163,000 and $1,939,000 in cash at the end of 1930. Dividends on the company's preferred stock were omitted last September and no dividends were paid on the common stock in 1931.

GETS NEW CONTRACTS.

New contracts received by Arthur G. McKee & Co., engineers and contractors, since the start of the year are in satisfactory volume and the outlook is for additional new business in the near future, A. G. McKee, president of the company, told stockholders at their annual meeting.

MEN INVESTIGATE

During the last six months many men in Chicago have been thrown out of their regular line of employment on account of conditions over which they had no control. Many of these men have come to the writer and have found success in my business and an opportunity to make more money than they were in the habit of making in their former line of work.

I have a product that every one in this country has a real need for and that is an investment on the part of the buyer rather than being an expense. Previous sales experience is not necessary as many of our best men came to us from lines of work foreign to that of selling and have been successful.

The writer has made $200 a week on an average for the last two years selling this product direct to the consumer. Washington's Birthday I will hire 12 men for this business and will teach those selected how to sell this product from A to Z.

If you are one who may be down on your luck and are looking for opportunity, come in and have a heart to heart talk, and I can prove to you in 5 minutes the Sun is still shining for the men in our employ.

The men I select will be between the ages of 22 and 45, of neat appearance and able to boss themselves. Apply Monday, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., Suite 4000, Mather Tower Bldg., Chicago. Ask for Mr. Averill.

Commonwealth Customers Pay LESS for LOANS
$2.03 is the average Monthly Cost of a $225 loan under COMMONWEALTH'S Reduced Rate. This allows 25 months for repayment. There is no lower cost than this in Chicago.
THE personal property which nearly every family owns and the signature of husband and wife enable one to secure any amount up to $300 quickly and easily.
THERE ARE NO fees or deductions. You may take 25 months or pay all or part sooner. Interest at the Reduced Rate is charged only while you keep the money.

Why pay more than HOUSEHOLD'S LOW RATE on loans? . . .
Household loans, $50 to $300 to families at reasonable rates. Rate on loans above $100 almost one-third lower than maximum permitted by small loan law.
For example, average monthly cost of $200 repaid in 20 equal monthly payments is $2.63—the lowest in Chicago.
